Some park officials getting a free ride

A Herald staff report

Think of yourself as a park district commissioner with a family of four. And you, like most suburban families, enroll in all sorts of park district programs, go swimming regularly and enjoy an occasional round of golf.

If you were simply the taxpaying public, you'd pay $100 or more for these recreational activities. But if you are a park commissioner in some Northwest suburban districts you don't have to pay at all.

Through a little known arrangement, park commissioners in eight area district's — Prospect Heights, Salt Creek, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Des Plaines and Schaumburg — and their families get to enroll free in park classes or get special park passes for swimming or golf.

IN PROSPECT HEIGHTS, park commissioners get use of park facilities at no cost for life. The commissioners also receive free passes to athletic events in High School Dist. 214 as part of a benefit exchange with the school district.

Administrators of the high school district are allowed to use facilities of the Gary Morava Recreation Center, such as the sauna, handball and racquetball courts, gymnasium and whirlpool.

"Certainly they could add up to a lot of money," Park Director Kent Krautstrunk said. "But I don't believe anyone is really abusing this. It's just a service that is provided."

Krautstrunk said there are seven current members and about seven past members of the park board who take advantage of the free benefits.

Krautstrunk said the principal and assistant principals at Wheeling and Hersey high schools are given free programming in exchange for letting the Prospect Heights Park District use the high school facilities. The business manager of High School Dist. 23 also gets a pass for free program enrollment.

IN THE SALT CREEK Rural Park District, three members of the park board regularly play free tennis at the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club, saving upwards of $300 a year. The tennis court is booked through the park district, usually each Thursday night, a spokesman for the tennis club said.

Though the Salt Creek district has no policy toward freebies for commissioners and their families, program directors said the children of some have received free programming from the park district. The director noted that extra fees for trips and special projects have always been paid for by the commissioners.

Commissioners on the Palatine Park Board receive free golf passes, worth $120 each. Park director Fred Hall said the passes are seldom used. He said they are distributed as an attempt to get the commissioners to see the conditions and operation of the course.

PALATINE PARK BOARD members and their families also receive passes for free swimming at the park district's pools. The average cost for family swim passes is about $25, Hall said.

In the Des Plaines Park District, commissioners and their families may register free for all programs which are not handled on a contractual

from Herald News Services

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. James R. Thompson Wednesday proposed a $10 billion budget he said will get the state's "fiscal house back in order."

The budget contains no new taxes, but provides for increases in state aid to education, expansion and improvements in prison facilities and increases in medical bill payments for welfare recipients.

Thompson presented the budget during his State of the State message to a joint legislative session in the House chamber.

THE $10.047 BILLION budget proposes spending a record $8.971 billion of requested appropriations. The rest is earmarked for long-term projects that cannot be completed or paid within one year.

Prisons get a big chunk of the budget. For the story and Part 3 in the Herald prison series see Pages 12 and 13.

In his first State of the State address, Thompson told the legislators it is impossible this year to reverse the deficit spending trend of the past several years.

"It is possible, however, to reverse the practice of spending more than is taken in. This must be done . . . Fiscal year 1978 is the year in which Illinois must get its fiscal house back in order," Thompson said.

BUDGET ITEMS expected to draw the most attention from legislators and special interest groups are:

• A proposed general funds increase of $75 million for elementary and secondary education and nearly $50 million for higher education. Thompson had announced those figures earlier and faces attempts by educators to increase those figures when his budget gets to the legislature.

• A hike of about $21 million for the Dept. of Corrections, which Thompson said is in a state of "crisis" because of rapidly increasing inmate population and poor conditions.

• An increase of $106 million for welfare, most of which will be used to meet increased medical services costs. The budget includes no increase in welfare grants.

Little additional money is included in the budget for other agencies.

Among items not included is funding for pay raises granted by the Office of Collective Bargaining. Thompson said such hikes will have to be paid by reductions elsewhere in the agency granting them or by cutting the number of employes on the payroll.

Legislators want hike in expenses

by STEVE BROWN

SPRINGFIELD — While Gov. Thompson has proposed an "austerity budget" for fiscal 1976-77, Illinois legislators have proposed increasing their own expense allowances by more than $2.5 million.

The expense increase package would raise expenses from $36 to $44 per day when the legislature is in session. Travel allowance would be boosted from 15 cents per mile to 20 cents per mile. The budget for legislative office expenses would be hiked from $12,000 to $17,000 per year.

Some legislators contend the increases are justified and others believe there are too many proposals being advanced at once. The Illinois House executive committee today will consider bills boosting the lawmakers' district office fund, per diem expenses and mileage allowances.

ATTEMPTS TO bring a bill to grant legislators $2,000 annually to rent cars for official business was left off the committee agenda for a second straight week. The car rental bill appears to be the fly in the ointment for passage of any of the increases.

The recommendations for all increases except the car rental bill, sponsored by State Rep. Thomas Miller, R-South Holland, were recommended by the Legislative Council and have the backing of the leadership of both houses.

While legislative leaders backed those measures, they are staying away from Miller's bill.

"I just saw this as a need, and I did not run around trying to drum up support," Miller said. He noted that while lawmakers are paid to travel from their homes to the state capital, no provisions are specifically made for travel within their legislative district.

"I think that many of us have found 80 to 90 per cent of our driving at home to be connected to our legislative business," Miller said.

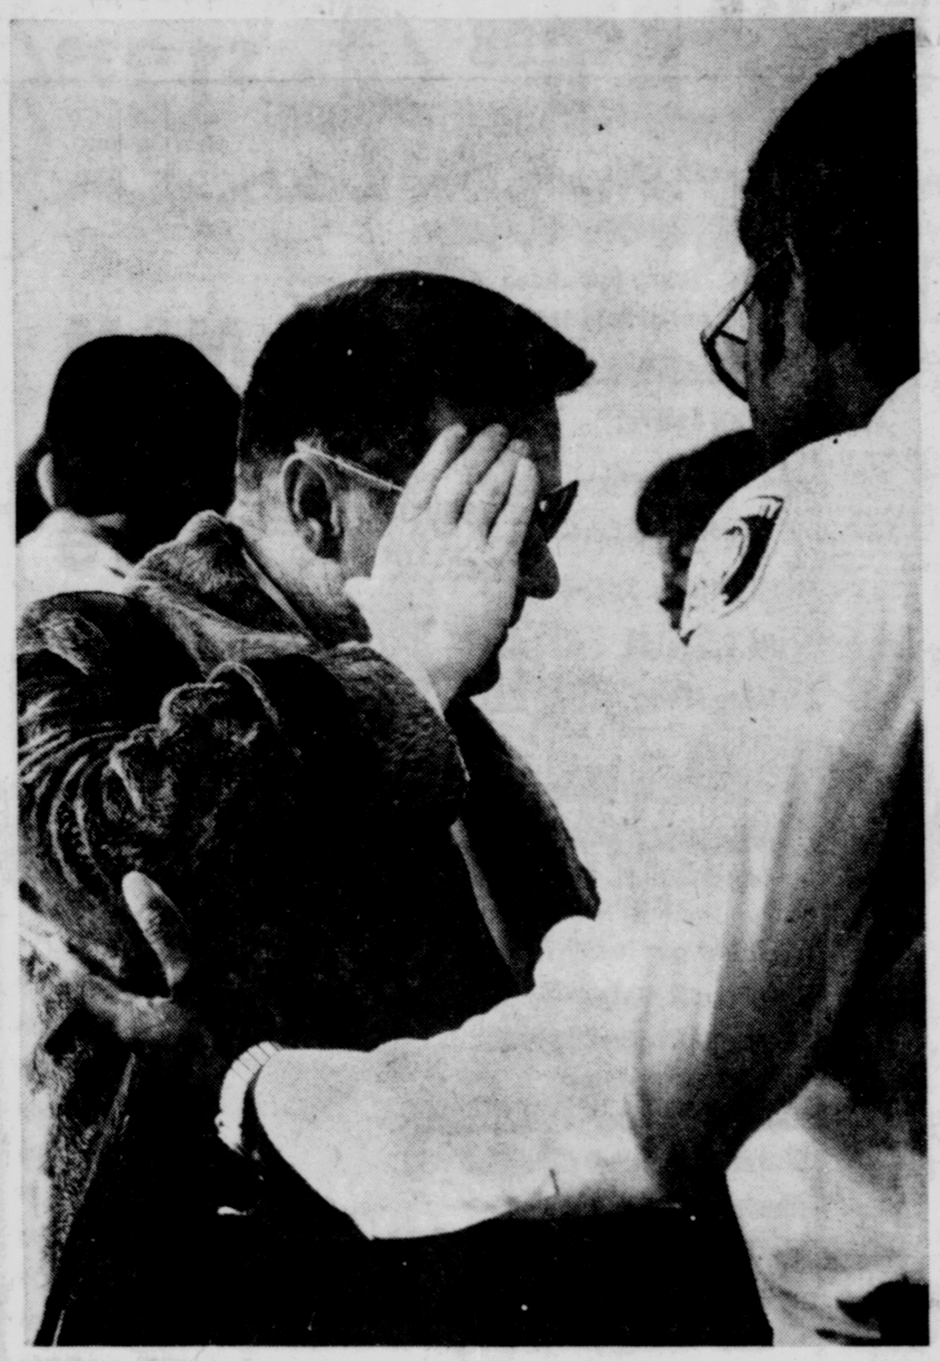
While Miller could not confirm reports that some Democrats want him to back off his bill to make the other expense increase proposals more tolerable, he said there have been "signals" that his measure is unpopular.

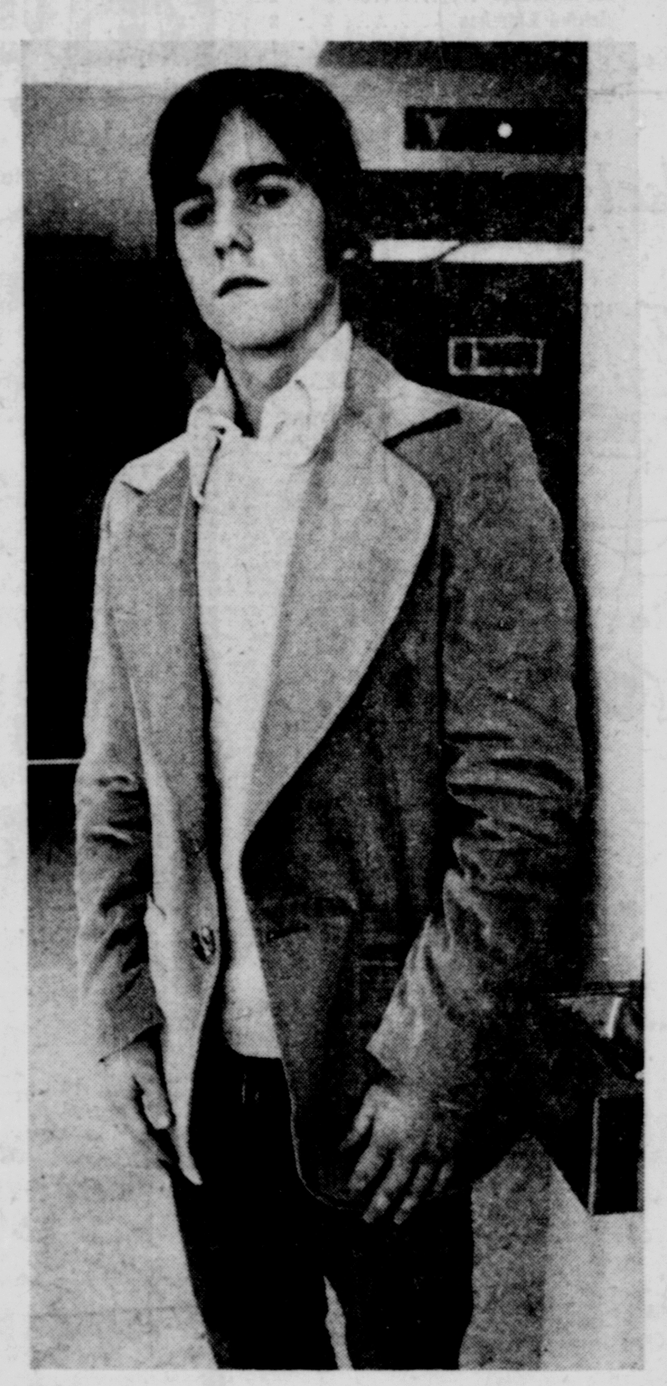
AN EXAMPLE of the bill's unpopularity surfaced Wednesday when Miller attemped to force a hearing on the measure today. He complained that "clerical errors" kept the bill off the committee agenda in recent weeks.

State Rep. Thadius Lechowicz, D-Chicago, initially raised objections to adding the bill to the committee agenda, but after a brief debate he dropped his public protestations and allowed the full house to vote down an effort to bring the bill up for a hearing.

Lechowicz, who declines to comment on his position regarding the car rental bill, reportedly is trying to stall consideration of the measure while the remainder of the expense increase package is moved through committee.

Whether Miller ever will get his bill before a committee remains an open question. Also undecided is whether the legislature will support the plan to spend another $2.5 million on themselves in the shadow of Thompson's call for fiscal restraint.





JAMES LOUGHNANE, left, avoids a photographer Wednesday as he enters the courthouse for the first day of testimony in his trial. He is charged with trying to murder his 16-year-old son Michael, right, to collect $240,000 worth of life insurance benefits.

Loughnane tried to kill: state

by NANCY GOTLER

Prosecutors Wednesday painted a picture of James Loughnane as a man who abandoned his son at age 2, and tried to murder him at age 16 to collect $240,000 in life insurance payments.

The trial of Loughnane, former Arlington Heights resident and Chicago policeman charged with trying to kill his 16-year-old son Michael by pushing him overboard into Lake Michigan, began Wednesday.

"We think the evidence will show that Michael Loughnane (while in the boat with his father) felt a sharp blow to the back of his head," State's Atty. John Mannion told the jury, "and felt his father pull his hands from the wheel, drag him to the back of the boat and try to push him in the lake.

"Michael resisted and tried to hang on to the boat but his father pried his hands from it and pushed him overboard," Mannion said. "Then, as his father looked at him from the boat, Michael pleaded with him, 'Dad, why are you doing this to me?' James left his son, making ever-widening circles around him in the boat, while Michael continued screaming."

AN HOUR LATER, George Woltman, one of Michael's rescuers, told jurors, one of his passengers spotted Michael and the crew pulled the shivering and blue-lipped boy from the water.

"One of my passengers said she saw a body floating in the water about 25 yards away," the Bensenville man said. "I told her it probably was debris, but when looked I saw an arm and heard a voice say, 'Help me, I can't swim any more. Please God help me, I can't swim any more.' "

Minutes later, Woltman said, he noticed two helicopters and three boats searching the area near where Michael was found and started his sailboat in their direction.

When he reached one of the police boats he told the police on board "not to leave them (Loughnane and Michael) alone because Mr. Loughnane tried to kill his son."

WOLTMAN'S TESTIMONY was part of the state's plan to prove that Loughnane, who had deserted his

Nude hostage freed unharmed

KENNETT, Mo. (UPI) — An Arizona fugitive Wednesday released unharmed a nude woman held hostage for nearly 12 hours, then shot and killed himself as police fired tear gas into his motel room.

"It's very hard to believe I'm safe because I was prepared to die," said the hostage, Patricia Cady.

Authorities said Mrs. Cady, 32, a nurse and mother of two, was abducted last week from a hospital parking lot by John David Bates, 23, an Arizona State Penitentiary escapee.

BATES, ARMED WITH two .38-caliber revolvers and a .12-gauge sawed-off shotgun, kept nearly three dozen officers at bay throughout the night before releasing Mrs. Cady. The siege ended a half hour later when Bates fired a bullet into his head.

Bates, serving a term of six years to life for assault with a deadly weapon, escaped last Thursday with the help of his wife, Charlotte, 27.

Armed with a gun, she accosted prison guards at a Phoenix hospital where Bates had been taken by van for treatment of back problems, locked them in the vehicle, and fled with her husband. Mrs. Cady was abducted the next day at Tucson's Pima County Hospital.

THE THREE drove in Mrs. Cady's car to St. Louis during the weekend and Monday drove 213 miles south to Kennett in the Missouri Bootheel where Bates has relatives. An informant tipped officers who surrounded the motel late Tuesday.

Mrs. Cady was tied nude in a shower while Bates negotiated with authorities. He also demanded heroin so he and his wife could kill themselves with an overdose.

About 1 a.m., Bates' wife emerged from the room and was taken into custody on kidnap charges.

After Mrs. Cady's release at 3:15 a.m., officers fired tear gas into the room. When Bates refused to come out, officers fired anther canister. Then, they heard a shot from inside the room and found Bates dead on the floor.

Reye's Syndrome victim improving

Seven-year-old Mark Fasick, a Mount Prospect boy stricken with the mysterious Reye's Syndrome, was moved out of intensive care Wednesday at Children's Memorial Hospital, Chicago, a hospital spokesman said. Mark was reported improved after being admitted to the hospital last Saturday afternoon. His mother, Marlene Fasick, said Mark began vomiting, was excessively drowsy and finally lapsed into a coma after coming down with chicken pox. Doctors do not understand how Reye's Syndrome develops and there is no cure. The mysterious disease seems to be related to viral infections such as Influenza B and chicken pox.

Man held in endangering teens

Hoffman Estates police Wednesday morning arrested a 56-year-old man who they say deliberately drove his car toward two teens and narrowly missed striking them, police reported. Police charged Leo Malloy, 362 Ashley Rd., with reckless driving after he nearly drove his car over the legs of a teenage boy and girl who were sitting on he curb in front of Malloy's house shortly before 8 a.m. Wednesday. Malloy has been released to await an April 13 court date in the Hoffman Estates branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Countdown to budget bickering begins

by STEVE BROWN
A news analysis

SPRINGFIELD — It should not take too long before Gov. James R. Thompson discovers just how many persons he has aggravated, maybe even outraged, with his $10 billion budget for fiscal 1978.

Although the governor has been attempting to diffuse possible shock over the austere spending plan for nearly a month, it appears he will have a fight on his hands to gain approval in the legislature.

Thompson has his fingers crossed that the Illinois General Assembly will share his views on the fiscal situation and agree to hold down spending, shift the focus of some programs, and reorder the priorities in other agencies.

THE FISCAL 1978 budget proposed the smallest spending increase in the past decade. It blends the call for restraint with a request to other public officials that they reexamine current programs.

Thompson insists he will fight hard to get his budget approved because he realizes it is a political fact of life that it is easier to blame the governor than the 236 collectively anonymous legislators for problems with the state services. At the outset, major fights in the legislature seem likely to occur over:

• New revenue. Some observers, especially Democrats, argue Thompson was over-dramatic and too conservative in his estimates of new revenue.

• Pay hikes. No cost of living increase is planned for the state's 117,000 employes. While Thompson suggested money might be available next year, it appears his current plan will not sit well with many workers involved in new contract talks.

• Transportation. The Crosstown expressway and Regional Transportation Authority will dominate attention, but an underlying fight will be the traditional push for more money for local road projects. Some lawmakers already are pushing for a hike in the gas tax.

Symbolically, Thompson and his staff are emphasizing that the normally separate state of the state and budget messages were linked Wednesday.

"THE STATE of the state is the budget," one aide said.

Thompson went before the joint session of the legislature quoting poetry and urging restraint. He also outlined suggestions that the state review its policy on programs where spending by local government is mandated but where the state provides no revenue. In his budget briefing for reporters, the governor promised to take the "ghost-payrollers" who have been hidden on other departmental payrolls and add them to his own staff.

He is willing to admit there have been spending deficits and that a massive government reorganization might not be practical now. The deficit question existed under the Walktr administration but never was recognized formally by Thompson's predecessor.

"On the social services front, I believe that mission reform is more important than structural change. It will do us little good — in fact, it will do us harm — to wrap inefficiency, waste and failure in a shiny new package," Thompson said.

He defines mission reform as the shifting of state effort away from institutionalizing persons in social service programs to in-home services. He has left no doubt that if the unionized employes force a cost of living raise in their contract negotiations with various state departments, department directors will have to absorb the cost and not look to the governor for help.

WHILE THE BUDGET is Thompson's handiwork, much of the document's framework was laid by the Walker administration. Besides the deficit spending, the need to give the budget's largest percentage increase in new spending to the prison system stems from the neglect of a burgeoning prison population and a get-tough attitude in the courts.

While recent budgets have been given to gimmickry — once there was a $6 billion building plan and another time a tax collection speed-up scheme — Thompson seems to reject the idea of book-juggling, preferring to use hope and determination to realize approval of his budget.

His hope is that there are signals that more money will be available for raises and new programs in fiscal 1979 if spending plans are heeded this year.

Thompson is determined to pursue aggressively every federal dollar available, including a possible compromise on his earlier opposition to the Crosstown expressway, in an effort to find more money.

His goals are tempered with hope and determination that a legislature dominated by members of the opposing party will not make him a fall-guy for either drastic cuts in state services or raising taxes.

$10 billion 1978 budget includes no new state taxes

sure to protest those suggestions.

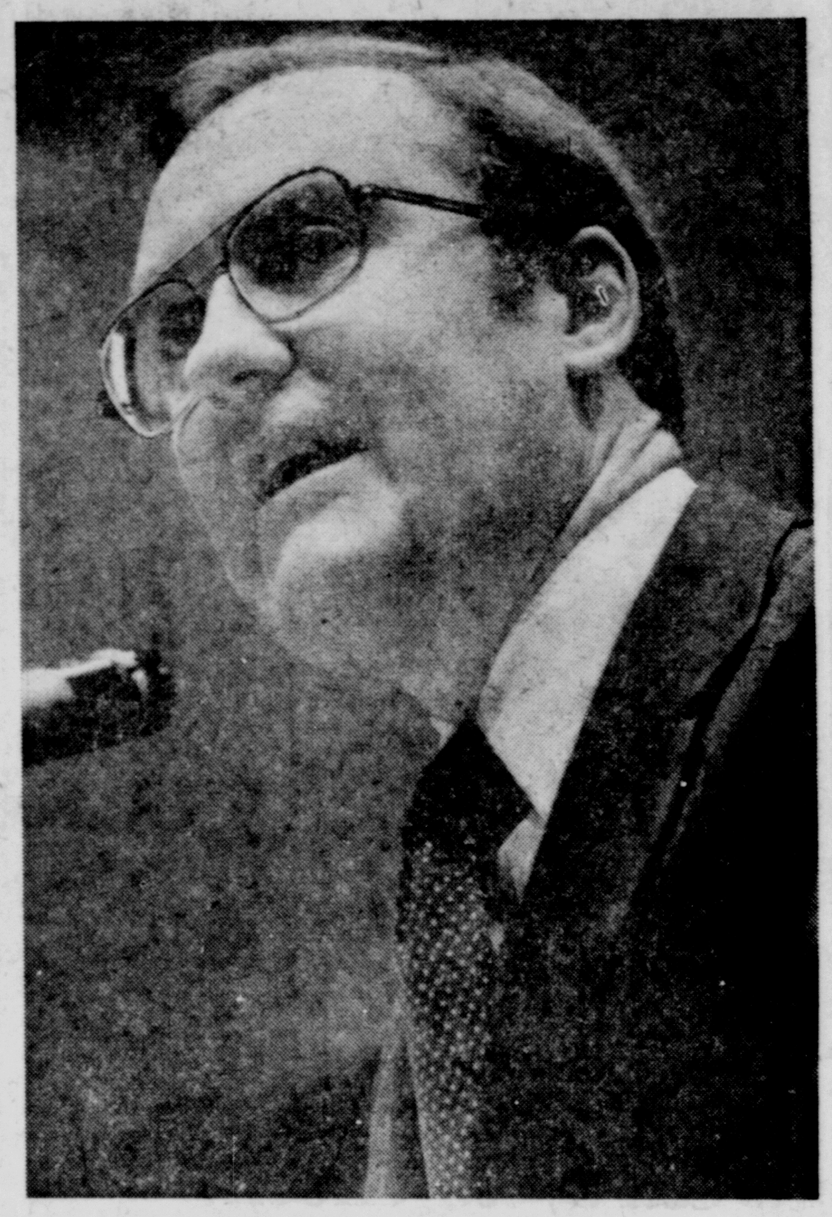
The budget also calls for a road building and repair program that Thompson admitted "may not satisfy the people of Illinois."

But, he said, the road fund already is at a 'dangerous" point. Bond money is running out and there are fewer and fewer federal road dollars available. If the people want a bigger road program, he said, "then we will have to tax ourselves more to do it."

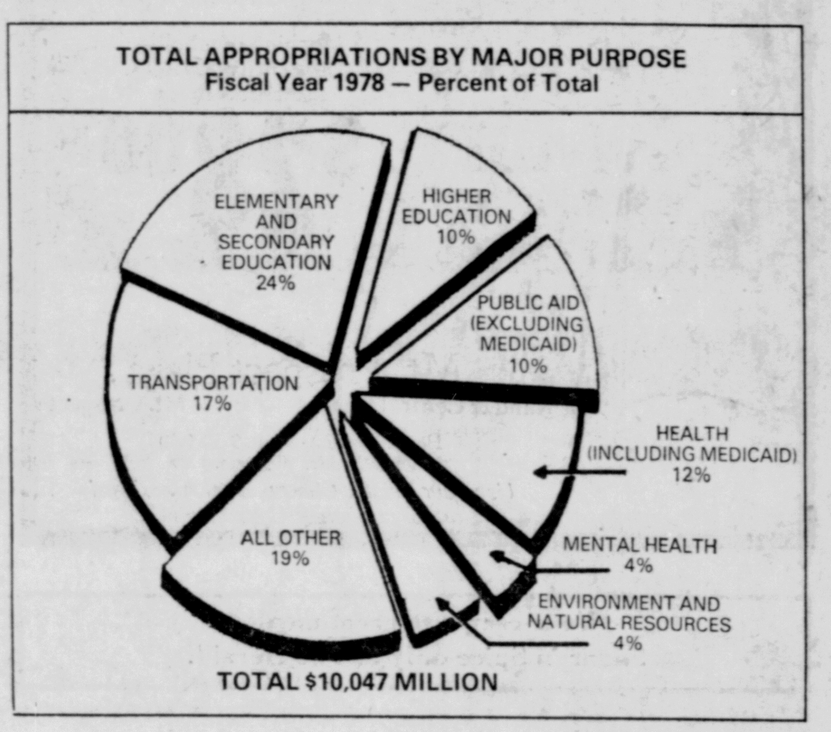
He said he may recommend a gas tax and auto license fee increase later if he believes it is needed.

Thompson said austerity is the only alternative to bankruptcy, an option which "has some serious disadvantages," and tax increases.

"On the surface this is not too radical a proposal," he said. "There isn't a legislator on this floor who would not subscribe to the proposition that the state should live within its means."



GOV. JAMES THOMPSON delivers his budget and State of the State message to a joint session of the Illinois General Assembly. Thompson proposed a $10 billion state budget for fiscal 1978 and said it was designed to "get the state's fiscal house back in order."



3-cent increase in gasoline tax to be introduced

SPRINGFIELD — At least one member of the Illinois Senate is not waiting for long-term studies on the need to increase state revenue and will introduce a bill to raise the gasoline tax by 3 cents next week.

State Sen. Stanley B. Weaver, R-Urbana, will present the legislation, which could add as much as $150 million to the state road fund, when the Illinois General Assembly reconvenes next week.

Weaver said he has conferred with Gov. James R. Thompson about the gas tax increase but got no commitment for support. In his budget message, Thompson suggested an increase in the gas tax might be needed to fund a road improvement and repair program that would cost more than the $500 million he has set aside for the coming fiscal year.

Senate minority leader David C. Shapiro, R-Amboy, said he was unaware that Weaver, a member of his Republican leadership team, was drafting a bill.

While Weaver wants to earmark all the revenue from the tax to go for bridge repair, Shapiro said such a limited plan might be impossible to get through the legislature.

"I think it will be difficult to pass any kind of tax increase this year, but if a gas tax hike is proposed, it will probably have to be for all phases of bridge and road repair and construction," Shapiro said.

family 14 years earlier, was heavily in debt and coldly calculated the crime to collect $240,000 in insurance he had taken out on his son, Mannion said.

"We intend to show that James Loughnane took his son out in the boat intending to kill him for the proceeds of those insurance policies," Mannion said.

Edward Genson, Loughnane's attorney, said he will not dispute most of the facts presented by the state but will prove they are evidence of a very different James Loughnane.

As a policeman his client took home about $1,000 a month, Genson said, and made about $250 a month from another part-time job.

He often held as many as three part-time jobs at a time so he could help support his two sons, who were living with their mother at the time, Genson said.

WHEN THEIR MOTHER was injured in a 1973 auto accident, Michael and his older brother James Jr. went to live with their father.

"We expect the evidence to show a very different life led by James Loughnane than the state has said," Genson said.

"Mrs Loughnane had started drinking, was found by her husband in a very compromising situation with another man and had ingrained in her sons a bias and prejudice toward their father," he said.

Genson contended Michael accidentally fell overboard, his father tried desperately and unsuccessfully to find him and that Michael lied about what happened to be removed from an unpleasant home.

"All he ever did for his son was give and never ask anything in return," Genson said.

Michael is scheduled to testify when the trial resumes at noon today.

Nighmares over, son lives normal life

Michael Loughnane is an "average teen-age boy" who doesn't trust people as much as he used to his foster mother and girlfriend both said.

"He questions adults all the time now," Rita Krysh, 422 W. Sigwalt St., Arlington Heights, the boy's foster mother, said.

For weeks after his father was charged with trying to kill him, Michael had nightmares, Mrs. Krysh said. "But now he's got his head on straight."

DESPITE THE TRIAL and his upcoming testimony, Michael's life has continued normally. He is an 18-year-old senior at Arlington High School and will attend the University of Utah next fall, where he plans to major in accounting.

"He isn't as free as he would like to be. It's a frightening situation for him," Mrs. Krysh said. "But he's carrying on as normally as can be expected under the circumstances."

Sharon Schlatterer, also an 18-year-old Arlington High School senior, has dated Michael for three years. She said he worries about the fact that his fellow classmates know about the trial and "would rather keep it quiet."

SHARON AND MICHAEL both work at a Palatine auto parts factory after school and on weekends.

She, too, is anxious for the Loughnane trial to end. "It makes him very nervous because he gears up for the trial and then it is postponed. We'll be glad when it's over."

Mrs. Krysh said she considers Michael to be part of her family. "He's a good son and now is just one of us."

basis.

Dave Markworth, park director, said commissioners are given golf passes worth $40 and swim passes worth $20.

"We allow them the courtesy of preregistering so they don't have to wait in line," Markworth said. "We feel they're donating a lot of their free time, and as opposed to alderman, are not paid for it."

THOMAS THORNTON, park director for the Arlington Heights Park District, said it has been a policy for more than 20 years to give free family swim passes to the commissioners. The passes cost other residents $30.

Families of park commissioners in the Schaumburg Park District are allowed to participate in one, in-district program per session.

Comr. Mike Doherty, for example, has one son enrolled free in a model-building class, but Doherty pays for a course taken by his other child.

Buffalo Grove Park District residents and their families may participate free in "activities that are fully subscribed financially," said Park Director Stan Crosland.

THAT MEANS THEY can join a program free of charge as soon as enough other residents have joined and enough fees have been collected to finance the program. If not enough residents join a program, commissioners and their families must pay the regular fee if they wish to participate, Crosland said.

Commissioners and their families also get free swim tokens worth $40 through the Buffalo Grove Park District. Crosland said the lifeguard has to be on duty anyway, so the free passes do not increase costs for the park district.

In Hoffman Estates, commissioners and their families receive complimentary passes to programs not considered a direct cost to the taxpayers, such as swimming.

Hoffman Estates commissioners can join any recreational program that is well-off financially or is inexpensive to run.

ILLINOIS STATUTES are unclear on the legality of the special privileges and free passes for commissioners. The statutes state that park commissioners are to govern "without compensation," but a spokesman for the Illinois Attorney General's office said the term "compensation" has not been clearly defined by the courts. He said the law definitely excludes monetary payment for services but is less clear on freebies.

The policy on free passes and programming therefore is left largely to the individual park boards.

The Rolling Meadows, Wheeling, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove park districts have avoided the ethical and legal questions that freebies raise by adopting a policy against them.

Steve Person, park director for Rolling Meadows, said the park board agreed not to take any free programming and passes upon recommendation of the attorney.

"They felt why should they open themselves up to that kind of criticism," Person said.

Carey to check Bilandic conflict

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said Wednesday his office will "look into" charges that acting Mayor Michael A. Bilandic voted to give city business to a firm he represented as an attorney. Bilandic, endorsed by the Democratic party organization in the April 19 mayoral primary, represented Brighton Building Maintenance Co. as an attorney when he was the 11th Ward alderman in the City Council.

The firm was one of 12 corporations indicted Monday by a federal grand jury on charges of bid-rigging and mail fraud in a $51.5 million highway and airport construction scheme. Bilandic Tuesday said to the best of his knowledge he never voted on an contracts involving the firm while serving as an alderman. The official record of City Council meetings in 1971, and 1972, however, shows Bilandic voted twice in favor of increasing the allocation of motor fuel tax funds for the rehabilitation of N. Michigan Avenue, months after the contract was awarded to the Brighton firm and Krug Excavating Co. Bilandic could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Two indicted in arson probe

Two Chicagoans, one a public fire insurance adjuster, were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury probing arson in the city's North and Northwest sides. Named in a 14-count indictment were adjuster Anthony Tinghino and Barry Tucker. The two are charged with mail fraud and using interstate commerce travel in a scheme to defraud several insurance companies. U.S. Atty. Samuel K. Skinner said the two are charged with setting fire to at least three businesses which they established in order to collect the insurance. The two allegedly collected nearly $100,000 in the scheme, Skinner said. He added the indictments are the first resulting from the U.S. Justice Dept. and FBI's 30-month investigation into neighborhood arsons in Chicago.

Northwestern increases tuition

Northwestern University announced tuition increases for $360 per year Wednesday for all undergradute and graduate students and some professional schools on its Evanston and Chicago campuses, effective this fall. University president, Robert H. Strotz, said the 8.4 per cent hike would bring undergraduate tuition to $4,620 per year. The $360 increase affects all schools except the medical, dental and the university's evening division.

Tuition for medical students will increase by $2,505, bringing the tuition to $6,855 for the 77-78 school year.

Student not denied admission: hospital

A hospital official denied reports Wednesday that a Northern Illinois University student who died of pneumonia Monday was strongly discouraged from entering the hospital an hour before his death. Kishwaukee Hospital Administrator Wayne Fesler said Ronald M. Pietrzak, 27, DeKalb, was told by the nurse on duty that his student insurance would not cover the care. He said the nurse offered to call a doctor to the small hospital to examine Pietrzak, if the student so desired.

"MR. PIETRZAK was not refused treatment. The only thing that was said was that student health insurance might not cover him," Fesler said. "We didn't refuse him, of course. You never refuse a patient." Fesler said the hospital does not have doctors on duty 24 hours a day. He said the nurse who saw Pietrzak told him to have a doctor look at his throat, which the student had said was sore. Fesler said the student gave no indication his condition was as grave as it proved to be.

Sheriff urges disaster alert

DeKalb County Sheriff Wilbur Scott Wednesday proposed county radio dealers sell residents a monitor which police could activate to warn of weather disasters. Scott said the monitor would include a tone alert, which could be set off by the sheriff's communications center. After the small receiver emitted its shrill blast, officials would be able to broadcast a verbal warning to county residents, Scott said. He estimated the cost of such units would range from $120 to $180, and suggested they operate on household current, batteries, or off a car cigaret lighter.

HUD rejects personnel funding

Arlington Heights' plans to use $24,000 in U. S. housing and community development money to hire a housing counselor and two senior citizen outreach workers have been rejected by the U. S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development.

The ruling means the village must revise its application for the program's second-year entitlement funds totaling $319,000.

The two personnel proposals were rejected by HUD because they do not support any of the three capital development activities planned with the remaining money, as the program requires, James Holzwart, an administrative assistant for the village, said.

THE VILLAGE'S application designates $140,000 of the federal grant for the relocation of a sewer line in the central business district, $85,000 for the acquisition of property for the Arlington Heights Historical Society and relocation expenses, and $64,000 to help pay for the installation of sidewalks along major thoroughfares.

The housing counselor and two part-time senior citizen outreach workers were to be hired by the Northwest Opportunity Center, but funded by the village with $24,000 from the community development grant.

Michael Raimondi, director of the Northwest Opportunity Center, said Wednesday he will ask village officials to either appeal the ruling by HUD or include the programs in the new municipal budget.

"Without a housing counselor, the village will be in a difficult position implementing its housing assistance plan. Once units are available, they could be overwhelmed with the number of applicants," Raimondi said.

THE HOUSING ASSISTANCE plan the village has filed with HUD, in conjunction with the housing and community development program, has a goal of 375 units of low-income housing within three years. A housing counselor's duties would be to assist eligible families in finding apartment owners willing to participate in the federal rent-subsidy program.

"We'll just have to implement the plan as best we can without a special housing counselor," Holzwart said.

Holzwart said the village administration will recommend the $24,000 designated for the housing counselor and senior citizen outreach workers now be used for additional sidewalk installation and for a contingency fund to cover unexpected expenses in completing the sewer relocation and historical society projects.

"We'll just have to implement the (housing assistance) plan as best we can without a special housing counselor," he said.

Raimondi said his agency will still assist the village in implementing the plan. "We will do whatever we can, allocating whatever staff time we can. However, the people we have are paid with township revenue-sharing funds and must also spend time in six other areas," he said.

CORONER MARK Holland pronounces Philip Sabatino dead at the Kocher Mine in Tower City, Pa. Later Wednesday, one of eight other trapped miners was found alive.

Man found alive in water ravaged mine

At least one of eight men trapped inside the Kocher Coal Co. mine in Tower City, Pa. has been found alive, a company official said Wednesday night. "We have made definite voice contact with one of the men," said Leon Richter, vice president of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Coal Co., owners of the mine. Jack Tisdale, of the Mine Enforcement Safety Administration, said rescue workers talked to Ronald Adley, 37, of Tower City. He said he did not know what physical condition Adley was in. Richter said there was no indication whether any of the other missing miners were still alive. Two men are known dead.

Rescue workers made contact with Adley by drilling a 60-foot communications hole through a coal seam into a section of the mine in which the men were believed to be working when a wall of water roared through the mine Tuesday. Adley's wife and family left the mine site immediately after officials told them that they had talked to Adley. They were "overjoyed."

Walter Vicinelly, state commissioner of deep mine safety, said they planned to expand the hole and get a blanket to him. Later they will drill a series of six-inch holes through coal veins and then use picks to dig through about 50 feet of coal to where Adley is located.

SEC probes alleged Boeing payoff

The Securities and Exchange Commission is investigating Boeing Co. for alleged payoffs to officials in the governments of Canada, Portugal, Egypt and Venezuela and 48 international airlines, court records showed Wednesday. The records specifically identified purchase agreements between Boeing and the "Canadian Government," "Government of Egypt," "Portuguese Air Force" and "Government of Venezuela." A Boeing spokesman in Seattle said, "An inquiry such as the current SEC investigation is likely to prompt unwarranted speculation about the involvement of anyone named in connection with it. No inferences are warranted in the case of these purchase agreements." The spokesman, Pete Bush, also said Boeing has supplied all information requested by SEC and will continue to do so in the interest of an early conclusion of the investigation.

W. Coast workers gunned down

Two utility company employes — a man and a woman — were shot to death Wednesday by a high-powered weapon apparently fired by a surprised burglar. Police searched house-to-house for the killer. Police surrounded several residences in the exclusive Roseville, Calif. residential area near Folsom Lake and then moved in, but no suspect was found. Two helicopters buzzed overhead. The bodies of the employes of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. were found in a four-wheel-drive company truck outside a ranch-style house that had been ransacked and burglarized.

Chief of JFK probe panel quits

The chairman of the House committee invesigating the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King resigned Wednesday in a feud with the committee's staff director, leaving the panel close to collapse. Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Tex., called committee counsel and staff director Richard Sprague "an unscrupulous individual and unconscionable scoundrel." House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., received Gonzalez' letter but said he had been unable to reach him by telephone at his Texas home. O'Neill said he will call the rest of the Democratic leadership and members of the assassination panel together Thursday to decide on the next step.

CDC deaths not mystery disease

Initial laboratory tests show no connection between the bacterium scientists believe caused the Legionnaires' disease and the mysterious illness that killed two employes of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, it was announced Wednesday. "We have completed direct microscopic examination of tissues from the two victims for legionnaires' disease," said Don Berreth, CDC public information director. "Those examinations were negative. "Not finding anything by direct examination under the microscope means it is less likely their deaths are connected with the Legion disease," he said.

Carter orders hiring cutback

President Carter Wednesday ordered an immediate, temporary 25 per cent cutback in new hiring in the executive branch, a move that could reduce the federal payroll by about 7,500 persons this spring. In a memo to the heads of all departments and agencies, Carter directed that only 75 per cent of the vacancies occurring After Feb. 28 be filled. Aides said the order will likely remain in effect until about late April, when the Office of Management and Budget sets employment ceilings for fiscal 1977 and 1978.

Priest murdered in Rhodesia

Black nationalist guerrillas in Rhodesia, bludgeoned to death a 58-year-old Spanish priest, Roman Catholic officials said Wednesday. He was the 11th Rhodesian missionary slain since December. In the capital Prime Minister Ian Smith Wednesday faced the worst political crisis of his career — a revolt within the white regime over his plans to let blacks buy land previously reserved for whites and drink in white bars.

A dozen whites in the 66-member House of Assembly said they will vote against Smith's proposal, which they charged would leave the government with no bargaining power in any subsequent talks with black nationalists over the majority rule issue.

Court rules Social Security discriminatory

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in an action which could affect more than a half-million American men, ruled 5 to 4 Wednesday that making it harder for widowers and husbands to collect Social Security benefits is unfair sex discrimination.

Under the law, a man applying for such benefits through his wife's earnings must show that he is or was receiving at least half his support from her. A woman in a like situation gets the benefits anyway.

Justice William Brennan and three colleagues looked on this system as an unconstitutional discrimination against women who have been required to pay Social Security taxes.

JUSTICE JOHN Paul Stevens also found the system a denial of "equal protection of the laws" under the Constitution, but saw it as discrimination against men rather than against women wage earners.

Stevens said Congress in passing the law acted out of "habit" and "automatic reflex." And the opinion by Brennan said the system merely perpetuated "old notions" about the relative dependency of men and women.

The dissenters were Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices William Rehnquist, Potter Stewart and Harry Blackmun.

Officials of the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare said the ruling could extend such benefits to at least 220,000 widowers and about 299,000 husbands this year at an over-all additional cost of $447 million by June.

Judges Geocaris, Dahl in bid for U.S. bench

by TONI GINNETTI

Cook County Circuit Court Judge James A. Geocaris, who presides over Northwest suburban courts, and Walter P. Dahl of Rolling Meadows are being considered for federal judgships.

Geocaris, who is presiding judge of the suburban Third District court branch of Cook County, and Dahl are among 18 finalists selected by U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., to fill two vacancies on the Northern district of Illinois bench.

Dahl and Geocaris, both Democrats, are former law partners.

THEY ARE AMONG 18 persons being considered to fill the vacancies left by the deaths last year of William J. Lynch and Richard W. McLaren.

The 18 names were made public Wednesday by the Chicago Bar Assn., which is screening the candidates at Stevenson's request.

Geocaris, 46, has been presiding judge of the Third District since December 1975. He replaced Judge Anton Smigiel who retired.

The Third District includes jurisdiction over Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates.

DAHL, 54, is head of the Cook County Circuit Court Probate Division and has been a judge for 12 years. He is a former resident of Arlington Heights. Dahl is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Geocaris, who resides in Chicago, Wednesday said he had been contacted by Stevenson's office several months ago but was unaware that he was among the finalists for appointment.

"Somewhere along the line a lawyer has to decide if he will remain in private practice or go into public service," he said. "This (judicial office) is what I decided I wanted a long time ago."

Geocaris has been a judge for 12 years and was presiding judge of Chicago's housing court before his transfer to the Third District, headquartered in Niles. He is a graduate of DePaul University's law school.

THE 18 NAMES from which Stevenson will recommend two to President Jimmy Carter have been submitted for screening to the Chicago Bar Assn., the Illinois State Bar Assn., the Chicago Council of Lawyers, the Federal Bar Assn., and the Cook County Bar Assn.

Stevenson's decision is expected within four weeks, a spokesman for the senator has said.

The other finalists are: Cook County Circuit Court Judges Marvin E. Aspen, Louis B. Garripo, Nathan M. Cohen, Mel R. Jiganti, R. Eugene Pincham, Warren D. Wolfson; Illinois Commerce Commission chairman Marvin S. Lieberman; Illinois Appellate Court Justices John J. Stamos and Nicholas A. Bua; U.S. District Magistrate Olga Jurco; and attorneys Milton I. Shadur, Carole Kamin Bellows, John-Cadwalader Menk, Stanley J. Roszkowski and John D. Schwartz.

Two charged in dope pickup at O'Hare

Two Chicago residents were arrested at O'Hare International Airport after they allegedly picked up three packages containing about $50,000 worth of marijuana.

Agents of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG) arrested Commodore Moore Jr., 29, of 221 E. 121 St. and Terrilynn Randall, 28, of 8123 Harper St. Tuesday night. They were charged with possession and intent to deliver marijuana.

A MEG spokesman said agents had staked out three packages that allegedly had been sent to Ms. Randall from Tucson, Ariz. and were left at a freight terminal around 5 a.m. Tuesday.

Agents made their arrests as Moore and Ms. Randall took possession of the packages, each with 25 pounds of marijuana, at 6:30 p.m. The packages were addressed to "DeAnswer Company," 7914 S. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ms. Randll told agents she was vice president of the firm, which reportedly deals in clothing.

Police said they believe the firm is no longer located at its listed address. The company telephones have been disconnected, police said.

MEG agents were given a tip off on the marijuana shipment by police in Tucson, Ariz. who knew the delivery was being made, a MEG spokesman said.

Both Ms. Randall and Moore were being held by Cook County Sheriff's authorities Wednesday night. A $25,000 bond was set for each suspect Wednesday morning. Both suspects were processed at Des Plaines Police Dept.

Both are scheduled to appear in the Daley Civic Center for a preliminary hearing on the charges March 29.

Parents blame each other in murder of tot

ATHENS, Tenn. (UPI) — Ronald and Wanda Maddux each told a jury Wednesday that the other was "taking pills" and torturing 4-year-old Melisha Morganna Gibson the day before she died.

Melisha, Mrs. Maddux' daughter, died after she was beaten, marched through the house for hours and fed hot sauce when she begged for water.

Mrs. Maddux told a Criminal Court jury her husband was jealous because another man fathered Melisha. She recited a sordid tale of brutality from the day she met Maddux.

Maddux said his wife took "energy pills" that made her irritable, then beat Melisha with a ruler and a fly-swatter.

BOTH MADDUX and his wife testified in their own defense after the state rested its case against them on second-degree murder charges.

Melisha was found dead of shock and exposure on a wet mattress at the Maddux' home at nearby Cleveland Oct. 13.

Prosecutors maintain Maddux actually tortured the child, but claim Mrs. Maddux is equally guilty because she did nothing to stop it.

Mrs. Maddux testified Melisha's father currently is serving a 10-year prison sentence for armed robbery.

She said she had one son by Maddux before they were married, had Melisha by another man when she and Maddux were separated, and only agreed to marry Maddux three years ago when he told her that was the only way they could get the children back from welfare agencies.

Maddux was taking pills and acting "plumb wild" on the day before Melisha's death, Mrs. Maddux said. "At supper he took the stick he was using to beat Melisha and sat it on the table like he was a big king or something," she said.

MRS. MADDUX said her husband beat the child, forced her to walk, and fed her hot sauce. She said the torture began on the morning of Tuesday, Oct. 12, and continued into the night.

Mrs. Maddux said the torture abated somewhat after dinner, and Melisha went to bed. "I kissed her goodnight. She was snoring."

Mrs. Maddux said she was awakened the next morning by children yelling for the school bus and sent Maddux to awaken Melisha.

"I heard him hollering, 'Missy, Missy,' " she said. "Then he hollered, 'I can't get her awake.' Something came over me. I knew what she had been through the night before."

Maddux, who testified before his wife, said she had a drug problem. He denied beating the child and insisted his wife did it.

Dist. 21 teachers study selves with students in mind

by DIANE GRANAT

At the age of 6, life's decisions are not too weighty. To play outside or watch television after school are among the few choices which are not already dictated by parents.

From these small beginnings, however, children learn how to make the larger decisions they will face when they grow up. In Wheeling Township Dist. 21, learning about values and decision-making is a subject in school — for teachers as well as students.

In the past four weeks about 70 teachers and administrators have participated in a special course called "Education for Responsibility." The course is part of "Project Impact," a training program funded by the Lilly Endowment Inc., Indianapolis, Ind.

DIST. 21 IS ONE of five model school districts in the country and the only district in Illinois to take part in the project.

The in-service course helps teachers clarify their own values and beliefs and also examines social values. The teachers are learning how to improve decision-making for themselves and their students, and how to help students understand what they believe in.

"Responsible decision-making is a decision in which a person acts in a much more moral way," said Frank Murphy, course instructor. "In the decision a person's self-esteem is respected and he considers the rights of others. He bases it not on whim, but on an objective approach to life."

A situation the teachers might examine, for example, could involve a student who enjoys working with cars and wants to take an auto mechanics class. However, the student knows he or she may need another year of foreign language to go to college. From the responsibility education course the teachers would learn how to help this student make the best decision.

ONE INCIDENT the teachers studied involved a Chicago secretary who refused to make coffee for her boss. The teachers looked at what her possible choices were and why she had those options, Murphy said.

The course focuses on teachers "because the teachers can't help students unless they help themselves," Murphy said.

But after they complete their training in March, responsibility education will become a part of the curriculum in most Dist. 21 schools.

June Hamer, a first-grade teacher at Riley School, 1209 Burr Oak Dr., Arlington Heights, said she hopes the course will teach her more strategies to help children learn what their values are.

ONE VALUES-classification exercise she now uses asks the children what they would rather do after school: go outside and play, play indoors or watch television. The children then discuss their values and decide whether their choices are good and if they are proud of them, Mrs. Hamer said.

The children also answer questions such as "What is it about you that your friends like to play with you?" Mrs. Hamer said. One girl answered, "My friends like to play with me because I always let them choose what they want to do."

The pros and cons of this value would be discussed, and for children who never let others do what they want, it is beneficial to have them hear a child say she gets along with others because she lets them have their way, Mrs. Hamer said.

Mrs. Hamer and another Riley teacher, Marilyn Kuznicki, are working with their school PTA on a television violence survey as a project for Murphy's class.

"OUR PROJECT IS to identify the program and use the techniques we learned in class to decide how we're going to solve it," Mrs. Kuznicki said.

Barbara Allen, a teacher at Hawthorne School, 200 Glendale Ave., Wheeling, said she hopes to use the training to help students in her class with poor self-concepts.

Mrs. Allen said she has used values lessons in her class in the past. One lesson, she said, involved a situation in which a group of people were trapped in a cave and only a certain number could be saved.

In this situation the children had to explain why they should be the ones to get out of the cave and the other students voted on which 10 people should be saved, Mrs. Allen said.

Murphy said the course also attempts to show teachers how to help their students become involved in the community and "to put their values into practice."

When the teacher training program is finished, Dist. 21 officials said they would like to set up parent and community workshops about values and decision-making.

Schools now teaching 'fourth R'

Throughout the history of American education citizens have expected public school teachers to instill in their students the values of the community. But teachers never were given the tools or the training to do this, says the Illinois Office o Education.

Now, under the title of "responsibility education," the IOE is trying to show teachers how to educate their students about social values and how to be responsible citizens.

Two Northwest suburban school districts, Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 207, are planning to participate in the state's program and have each designated a school to take part in a statewide Responsibility Education Network.

THE WHEELING Township Dist. 21 in-service training course "Education for Responsibility" is separate from the IOE's program, but Supt. Kenneth Gill said the two programs use similar concepts.

"Responsibility education means that every teacher tries to develop in his students a sense of responsibility for themselves, their fellow citizens, and their natural environment as well as the skills and knowledge necessary to act in a responsible way," according to a report from the state education office.

The "fourth R," which resembles civics education of a generation ago, attempts to develop within youngsters an understanding of law and authority, concern for nature and the environment, good health and safety practices and an understanding of our economic system.

Added modern-day goals of responsibility education are the development in young people of creative thinking, effective communication and marketable career skills and teaching youngsters how to adjust to a changing world.

TO PROMOTE THE responsibility education concept, the Illinois Board of Education plans to ask the Illinois General Assembly to allocate $1 million in 1977-78 to create curriculum models, teaching materials and in-service training programs in Illinois schools.

The state education office plans to set up responsibility education centers in 200 schools throughout the state to begin programs.

Prospect High School, 801 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect, originally was designated as a member of the Responsibility Education Network.

But last month the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education decided to withdraw from the program until the proposed unit district combining Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 and part of Dist. 214 is settled, said Edward Spacapan, principal of Prospect High School.

DIST. 207 HAS designated Maine South High School, 1111 S. Dee Rd., Park Ridge, as a member of the network, said Michael Myers, assistant superintendent for instruction.

Myers said the responsibility education program is being promoted by State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin "to create a positive image of the "IOE" and at this time the state office is "just grappling around looking for ideas" for the program.

At Maine South, however, the use of a simulation approach to teach decision-making is one responsibility education project already occurring, Myers said. Dist. 207 also may use responsibility education as the theme of its teacher in-service training next year, he said.

Schaumburg School, 520 E. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg, will represent Dist. 54 in the responsibility education network, said Principal Len Sirotzki.

SIROTZKI STRESSED that "it's not a subject. We do not have responsibility education at 10:05 on Thursday." Instead, it is a concept incorporated in other programs teaching children to be responsible to themselves, their family, their school and community, he said.

Second-and sixth-graders at Schaumburg recently completed a two-day field trip in which "the younger kids and older kids had to be responsible to each other," Sirotzki said.

3 youths face charges for possession of drugs

Three Arlington Heights youths have a March 16 court date to answer narcotics charges stemming from their arrest for possession of drugs ranging from marijuana to barbiturates.

Police Monday afternoon arrested two Hersey High School students, aged 15 and 16, after an investigation by detectives traced narcotics to the home of the 16-year-old, police said.

Police obtained a search warrant, searched the youth's house and found drugs including barbiturates, marijuana and PCP, an animal tranquilizer, police said. Police also confiscated 19 disposable hypodermic syringes and arrested the boys at the house.

A 14-YEAR-OLD Arlington High School student charged with possession of three small packets of PCP also will appear in court March 16. He has been placed in the custody of his parents.

The 16-year-old was charged with three counts of possession of controlled substances, misdemeanor possession of marijuana and possession of hypodermic syringes. The youth was sent to Audy Juvenile Home to await pretrial hearings.

His alleged 15-year-old accomplice was charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana and turned over to his parents.

Both cases will be heard in the Juvenile Division of Cook County Circuit Court in Skokie.

Workshop to cover 8th-grade skills test

Graduation requirements for eighth graders in Wheeling Township Dist. 21 will be discussed by the board of education in a workshop at 8 p.m. today. The meeting will be held in the administration center, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Board Pres. Susan Rose said the board members will discuss whether proficiency tests in certain skills should be required of eighth-grade students and whether proficiency tests are needed at other grade levels.

The board also will discuss use of school buildings by outside groups and field trips for students, Mrs Rose said.

Special voter signup hours

Wheeling Township Hall, 1818 E. Northwest Hwy., will have special hours for voter registration beginning today.

Dorothy Hauff, town clerk, said the office will be open from 7 to 9 p.m. today and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. The final day o register for the April 5 township election and the Village of Arlington Heights election is Monday. The final day to register for elections to be held April 19 is March 21.

The township hall also is open for registration during the regular office hours from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each weekday.

'The most bizarre murder case'

Hundreds hear Manson author

VINCENT BUGLIOSI, chief prosecutor of convicted killer Charles Manson, told crowds of students at Harper College Wednesday night that Manson was "a very sophisticated little con man."

by DICK DAHL

Vincent Bugliosi is finding a good murder story is a great drawing card — especially when the murder is among the most bizarre in the history of American crime.

Bugliosi packed them in Wednesday night at the Harper College student lounge in Palatine and retold the story of his role in placing Charles Manson and four other defendants behind bars in 1970 for their roles in the legendary Tate-LaBianca murders.

As a Los Angeles County deputy district attorney, Bugliosi obtained indictments against Manson and four of his followers on 23 counts of first-degree murder and four counts of conspiracy to commit murder.

"The main reason for the interest in this case is not because of the brutality," he told the crowd of several hundred persons. "The principal reason is that it is the most bizarre murder case in the annals of crime.

"HAD SOMEONE written a fiction novel about this case it wouldn't have been good fiction. It wouldn't have been believable."

Bugliosi, however, found that the story of the little man with the power to make others kill for him is very good nonfiction.

The book he coauthored with Curt Gentry, "Helter Skelter," is one of the top-selling books of recent years. At a press conference preceding his speech, he said he is working on another book — this one about a case involving the murder of a Los Angeles policeman.

Bugliosi, now in private law practice, is on a 2½ month speaking tour retelling the "Helter Skelter" tale.

"THE CROWDS on college campuses have been absolutely enormous," he said. "Some have broken attendance records."

With the fame have come problems, however.

"I still get the death threats — about eight or nine over the last several years," he said.

The threat of danger is subsiding, though, he said, because "the Manson family has been decimated."

"Most of the hard-core members are behind bars," he said.

THERE HAVE BEEN no attempts on his life, Bugliosi said. He recalled, however, that the FBI in monitoring Manson's prison mail, relayed a letter from a 17-year-old girl who wrote someone was going to "get" Bugliosi when he was to be in Sacramento, Calif.

"Needless to say I didn't go to Sacramento," he said.

Bugliosi said he is convinced Manson won't be freed from prison when he becomes eligible for parole in 1978.

"Absolutely impossible, zero chance," he said. "Way way down the line, maybe 20 years, he might get out."

Bugliosi characterized Manson as a "very sophisticated little con man" who had the power to make his followers (the Family) believe he was Jesus Christ.

"The intriguing question is how did this little guy who wouldn't step on a flower, who loved animals, yet thought nothing of killing people, gain this incredible control to the point where they would kill for him without question."

Crane hits, Mikva hails ethics bill

A House code of ethics limiting congressmen's outside earnings to $8,625 a year would not have hurt U. S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, last year, but would have cost U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, about $5,500.

Mikva said he earned about $6,775 last year in lecture fees and other honorariums, while Crane estimated he was paid about $13,000 in honorariums in 1976.

The House ethics bill Wednesday was approved 402 to 22. It will take effect in 1979.

CRANE BLASTED THE provision early Wednesday as a "public insult" while Mikva hailed it as a badly-needed reform.

"I think it's a strong code — one that's got some bite to it and that's why it ran into opposition," said Mikva, who voluntarily reported his total 1976 income as $58,104,04, including $19,021.96 in outside family earnings.

Crane said it was an insult to suggest that giving congressmen a pay raise and then passing ethics legislation would have any effect on dishonest lawmakers.

"I can't conceive of anyone who takes a bribe or pay off putting that down on a disclosure statement," said Crane, who estimated his 1976 income at about $70,000, including $13,000 in outside honorariums.

THE ETHICS reform bill would:

- Limit members' "outside earned income" to 15 per cent of their official $57,500 salary, or $8,625 a year, beginning in 1979.
- Require congressmen to disclose all sources and amounts of income annually.
- Forbid members from accepting gifts worth more than $100 from lobbyists.
- Prohibit retiring or defeated congressmen from using government funds to pay for foreign travel.
- Restrict the use of congressmen's franking privilege for mass mailings at government expense.

"Unearned outside income," which includes dividends on stocks and bonds, and income from family-owned farms and businesses is not included in the ethics bill.

Crane said the ethics code would "guarantee that certain talented people will be foreclosed from serving in Congress."

"Congress will be made up of highly overpaid clerks and millionaires" after the income restrictions go into effect," he said.

BOTH CRANE AND Mikva said they would not be greatly affected by either the ceiling on outside income, or the disclosure requirement.

"I don't practice law and my honorariums are well below the maximum," said Mikva, who has published his yearly income, net worth and income taxes in the Congressional Record each year he has been in Congress.

"While I do not serve on any corporation board and I am not a laywer, I was a professional lecturer and have derived outside income from that," Crane said. "I also have written professionally."

Mikva called the exemptions for family-owned business income and dividends from stocks and bonds "necessary."

"How can you prohibit a Rockefeller from serving in Congress?" he said.

BUT CRANE ATTACKED the exemptions.

"I have been told that one member of Congress (Pennsylvania Sen. John Heinz), a millionaire, earns $400,000 a year in dividends, interest and other (family) income," Crane said.

Crane said requiring members to disclose the source and amount of their personal income was treating congressmen "like second-class citizens." But he said income disclosure is "certainly something I can live with."

Mikva's own financial statement, published May 6, 1976, in the Congressional Record, reported his net worth as $90,900.

His $58,104 income in 1976 included a $39,072 Congressional salary and $10,652 earned by his wife, an Evanston teacher. The rest of the money came from teaching, lecturing, dividends and interest, the report states.

Crane said he felt the "overwhelming majority" of congressmen were honest and that the ethics bill would do nothing to stop dishonest members from taking bribes and covering up other illegal or unethical payments.

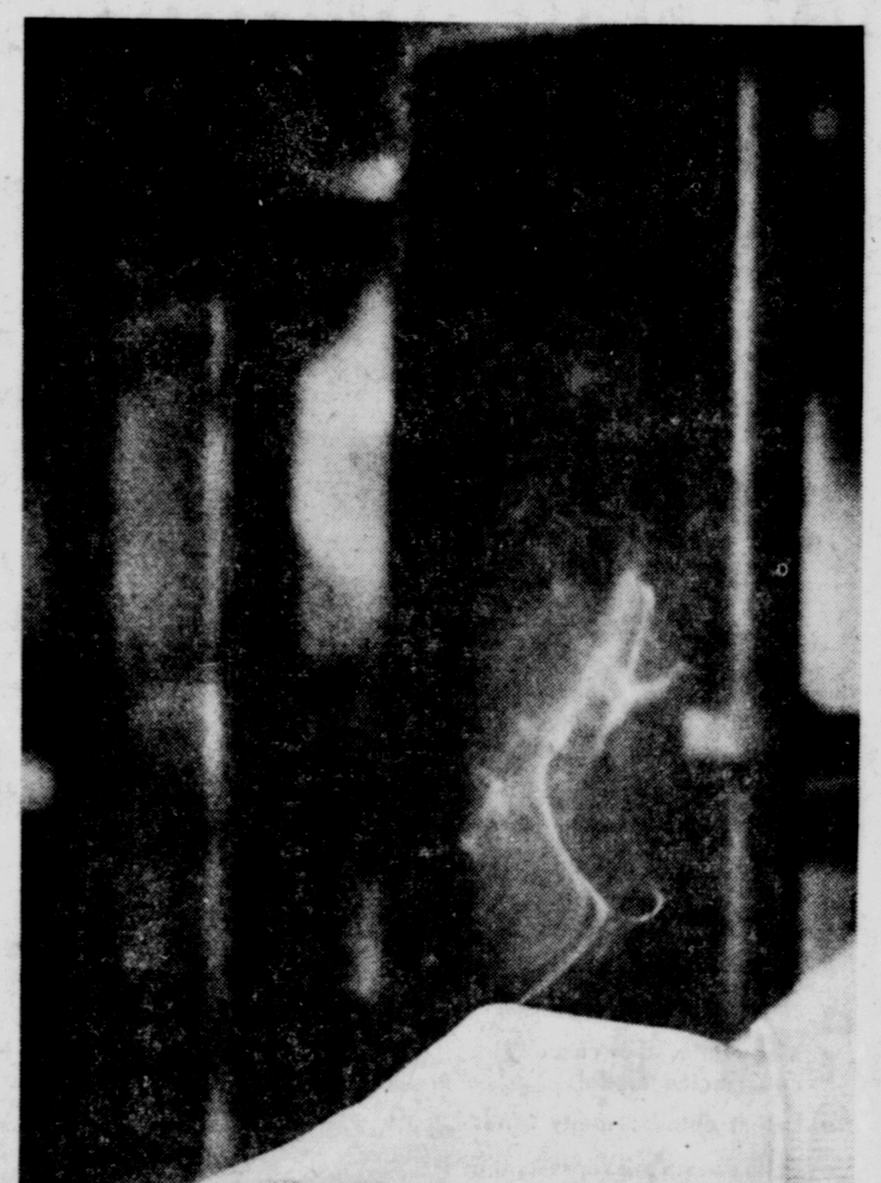
Life behind bars tells on their faces



Theirs is a life behind bars. Some tell their stories in looks, like the scarred face of Raymond Matthew who tells you "prison's been more or less my life story"... and some tell it in a number scrawled on their hand, like the 1999 freedom date for Randy Gaylor, who peers from behind cell bars.

Prisons plagued by numbers game

by TONI GINNETTI
Third in a Series

SPRINGFIELD — He leans back in his chair, rubs his brow and admits there are days he'd rather not have this job.

Lately there seem to be more of those days, and even for a veteran corrections mind such as Charles J. Rowe, the strain they bring can be awsome.

The stabbing of two guards in an overcrowded state prison draws alarming, fleeting public attention, but the ongoing woes of an overtaxed, underfinanced penal system go to sleep with Rowe every night.

It is trying pressure for someone who began as an educator and intended to stay in the corrections field "for a year."

"RIGHT NOW I can only say the system is in a state of crisis. The adult division population is just straining every department we have. I won't say we don't have problems. I'm not that naive."

Rowe, 36, has headed the $95 million department since August when Allyn R. Sielaff resigned. His career in corrections began in 1962 with the Illinois Youth Commission. He has served as assistant to the director of corrections and chief of administration.

Gov. James R. Thompson reappointed Rowe to the $38,000-a-year acting directorship in January.

Towe has inherited a system plagued with troubles. He is candid in his assessment of the current prison picture.

"I spend most of my time reshuffling resources, robbing one department to pay another. You just raid resources. It comes down to days when I have to make a decision on whether to spend money on food or clothing."

Rowe points to alarming figures showing the number of adult offenders nearly doubling from 5,900 in 1972 to 9,800 in 1976.

ILLINOIS PRISONS: The crisis behind bars

"And our projections, which I think are conservative, are for 12,000 by 1978."

BECAUSE THE SYSTEM of placing prisoners is regionalized, some facilities are feeling more pressure. The Stateville Correctional Center is by far the worst, Rowe admits, since the majority of the state's offenders come from Cook County and are sent to the Joliet maximum security complex.

Stateville, the scene of two stabbings Jan. 10, had 1,400 inmates in 1974. Today it holds nearly 3,000 despite its original rated capacity of half that, Rowe says.

"It's just not equipped to handle that many," he says.

At the state's other maximum security centers, the situation is hardly better. The center in Pontiac has had its rated capacity raised to 1,750 while the capacity rating for the Menard maximum security center in Chester has been raised to 2,600, Rowe says.

"And I have no more staff in the agency than I did four years ago," Rowe says. "In fact I have about 100 less," with a total of 4,900 employes in the corrections system.

The outlook that the burgeoning population trend will cease is not bright. "If you take 1973, we received about 2,000 new inmates," Rowe says. "Last year we got 5,000 and this year we're projecting 6,000."

THERE IS a reason for the rising numbers and it is grounded in society's call for law and order, Rowe says.

The increasing calls for the legal system to "get tough" on criminals may be bringing better conviction rates for police departments and judges, but it has brought critical problems to the penal system which traditionally has been sidestepped in funding priorities, Rowe says.

More people are going to jail, longer sentences are being ordered and fewer people are coming out of the system each year because of a declining parole rate, he says.

"I understand what the community is saying, but if we're going to lock more people up, we're going to have to pay the tab."

But the numbers on that potential tab are shocking.

"TO BRING PRESENT facilities up to standards would take about $800 million to $1 billion, and that's just to upgrade," Rowe says. Maintaining that system would require double the present operating costs, he says.

For a state already starved of needed funds, that solution is unrealistic, Rowe admits.

Instead, the state is attempting to reorganize the inmate population and make use of existing facilities to accommodate temporarily the overload.

Converting mental hospitals and youth detention facilities, both areas which have had declining populations in recent years, is central to that effort.

Also central to corrections' problems is a lack of commitment and understanding from the public, Rowe says.

"CORRECTIONS does not have as high a priority in society or in the General Assembly," Rowe says. "I'm not being critical of the General Assembly. I understand their dilemma. What it comes down to often is are we going to provide more money for schools to educate our kids or money for prisons. I think if I were in their place I might say the same thing.

"But now we've reached the point where our resources are so taxed that the federal courts will have to intervene."

Federal action could come in the wake of a lawsuit filed by the U.S. Justice Dept. against the state's corrections department charging grossly inadequate medical and sanitary conditions at state prisons.

"It's a question of will the money be forthcoming to meet minimum standards," Rowe says. The department has asked for 20 per cent more funding next year, "and it's difficult for me to project beyond that," he says.

"The federal courts can't force the legislature to come up with more money, but they can say 'you can't put any more people in this facility.' "

The federal suit is only one of nearly 300 actions pending against the state department. They are predominantly civil rights suits filed by inmates, and although they are not a new phenomenon, their numbers have increased as prison problems have increased.

THAT, TOO, has taken an additional monetary toll on the system, and where once one attorney served as the department's legal staff, eight now are required.

Wipe away the lawsuits, the overcrowding, the need for more money and you begin to touch upon the changes needed in the corrections system, Rowe says.

"The ideal is to have enough community-based programs to help inmates return to society," he says. "Another aspect is to have manageable-sized institutions of about 400."

Adequate staffing and programming that teaches practical skills are needed as well, he says. "There isn't much call for license plate makers or shoe repairmen. We still make brooms and brushes at Menard, but there isn't a great demand from broom makers in Chicago."

The most urgent need now is for more money and room.

"We need additional bed space for at least 1,500 inmates," Rowe says. "That is absolutely essential right now. Our major problems relate to the severe overcrowding we face."

ALTERNATIVES TO prison, such as relying more on probation or work release programs, could be answers, but Rowe says current public attitudes won't support such measures.

"The public is not in favor now of putting more people in the community. That is not the prevailing mood of the community or the General Assembly.

"The attitude is very clear — if you commit a crime you should pay for it. But I just can't envision the idea of a total punishment model where you just lock people up and don't offer anything, but expect them to reform.

"The greater concern to me is what's going to happen to the system if resources are not forthcoming and additional monies just to meet minimum needs. I think those conditions, coupled with the severe overcrowding, could just be devastating."

Tomorrow? The legislative view of the state corrections department.

23% hike asked for state prisons

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — Efforts to solve the state prison overcrowding problem received major attention from Gov. James R. Thompson in his budget message Wednesday.

Thompson offered what he termed a "whopping" 23.5 per cent increase in the Illinois Dept. of Corrections budget to expand facilities, improve training programs and purchase essential goods for prison inmates. The proposal will give the department $132 million to run the state prisons.

The steps to expand the corrections system and ease overcrowding, which have been detailed this week in The Herald, represent the largest percentage spending increase of any department in the governor's new budget.

BESIDES THE $20 million increase in the operating budget, the governor earmarked another $25 million for construction to either modernize existing facilities or construct a new prison.

Thompson admitted he is being purposely sketchy in his capital improvement plans because he has not made any final decisions.

"I have a report from (Illinois Dept. of Corrections Director Charles) Rowe, but I have not studied it and I have not met with people who are complaining about some of our plans," Thompson said.

A number of Kane County residents have voiced concern about reports several juvenile correction centers will be converted to house adult prison inmates in an effort to ease overcrowding. Thompson said he promised to meet with residents before making any moves.

THE GOVERNOR also hinted that there may be a new Downstate prison started during fiscal 1978, which begins July 1.

"We have been looking at a lot of options, including the use of surplus modular housing for a prison in Southern Illinois. The people down there don't seem to mind having prisons," Thompson said.

Several legislative committees today will begin the job of reviewing conditions in Illinois prisons and may develop their own list of recommendations for solving problems.

Illinois has 9 prisons for its adult offenders

There are nine adult prisons in the Illinois Dept. of Corrections, four of them maximum security facilities, three medium security facilities and two minimum security facilities.

The maximum security facilities include:

- Stateville Correctional Center. This facility in Joliet is the largest adult prison, holding nearly 3,000 men. It was completed in 1925. A minimum security honor farm for 200 men also is located on the 64-acre complex.

- Joliet Correctional Center. This is the state's oldest prison, built in the 1850s. It holds 1,000 men and also is the facility which processes all adult offenders sentenced in Northern Illinois.

- Menard Correctional Center. This facility is located in Chester near East St. Louis. It was opened in 1878 and holds some 2,000 inmates. Offenders from Central and Southern Illinois are received and assigned to institutions from here.

- Pontiac Correctional Center. This facility is located in Pontiac, about 60 miles southwest of Chicago, and has a rated capacity of 1,200. It was originally opened in 1871 as a boys' reformatory.

The medium security facilities include:

- Dwight Correctional Center. This facility located in Dwight, about 60 miles southwest of Chicago, has housed female offenders. Plans are under way to convert it to a medium security facility for males, with female offenders to go to the converted Geneva Youth Center in Geneva.

- Sheridan Correctional Center. This facility in LaSalle County is about 50 miles southwest of Chicago. It was established in 1950 as a facility for delinquent youths but was converted in 1973 to a medium security adult institution for 265.

- Vandalia Correctional Center. This facility, located about 240 miles south of Chicago, was opened in 1923 and has a capacity of 650.

The minimum security facilities include:

- Vienna Correctional Center. This newest of the state's prisons, located 350 miles south of Chicago, opened in 1971. It is located on 3,500 acres and holds 530 inmates.

- Menard minimum security center. This facility began receiving inmates this month. It is converted from the former Menard Psychiatric Center and will receive 100 minimum security-ranked inmates from the state's other facilities.

The way we see it

New bus routes a good addition

The new bus route between downtown Des Plaines and Woodfield Shopping Center, announced this week by the Regional Transportation Authority, is a logical and needed expansion of mass transit in the area.

The RTA board is expected to approve the new route today, with its scheduled beginning June 1. The route will run from the Des Plaines train station along Northwest Highway and Golf Road to Woodfield.

The service will extend bus service to southern areas of Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights that have not been served by buses in the past. It will also link up with a bus that connects Des Plaines and Evanston extending service all the way to the North Shore.

The new route's success will depend on whether it attracts riders. Past experience with RTA bus routes from residential areas to train stations has proved that dependable, well-publicized bus service can succeed. We hope the Des Plaines-Woodfield route will receive the same support.

In recent months the RTA has started feeder bus routes to train stations in Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect as well as Des Plaines. Their success has been heartening to those who believe mass transportation is a necessity in an era where energy supplies are becoming increasingly tight.

For all its problems, the RTA has shown that it is capable of providing much-needed services to the suburban areas. The newest route is an extension of that service which will be a welcome addition to the area.

Fishing limit needed

The United States took control of all ocean fishing 200 miles off its coast this week in an effort to save several species of fish from extinction.

U.S. Sec. of Commerce Juanita Kreps has called the new fishing law "the most significant marine fishing legislation in our history" and no one is arguing with her.

The law expands the previous 12-mile zone set in 1966 to 200 miles and gives the United States the right to set quotas on fishing catches, prohibit fishing for some species, license foreign fishing ships and set up zones where all fishing is restricted.

The legislation came none too soon.

The freedom of the seas philosophy that the United States had previously adhered to is no longer feasible in the face of modern fishing techniques that make it possible for entire schools of fish to be cleaned out.

Haddock, once a plentiful and inexpensive fish, is threatened with extinction, as are cod, mackerel and yellowtail flounder.

The United States cannot afford to sit back and hope the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Seas will reach an agreement to govern fishing while its stocks of fish continue to be depleted. The 160-nation assembly seems no closer to an agreement today on the protection of oceanic resources than it was when it first met three years ago.

The U.S. action, while it may cause problems for some nations with large fishing fleets, is necessary to protect a resource whose limits grow more obvious each year.

Paul Warnke's magic shift from dove to defense hawk

Paul Greenberg

It isn't unusual for a distinguished nominee for high office to change his mind on a matter or two on the road to Washington. See Griffin Bell. What's remarkable in Paul Warnke's case is the speed and thoroughness of his conversion. Warnke before and Warnke after testifying to the Senate Armed Services Committee are scarcely recognizable as the same political adviser. His views seem to have undergone a powerful transformation, like the protagonist in those old ads for a Charles Atlas course.

Before being nominated as this country's chief arms negotiator, as Senator Henry Jackson of Washington noted, Warnke had opposed the development of the B-1 bomber, Trident submarine, submarine-launched Cruise missile, an airborne warning and control system, mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles, multiple independently targetable nuclear warheads, various improvements in American land-based missiles, even a new main battle tank for the Army . . a total of 13 major weapons systems or defense programs in all.

After his nomination, Warnke's whole tenor has changed from that of the fellow who opposed all these programs. It's as though he hadn't changed his mind about one or two things, but everything. He's sprouting hawk feathers at a rate hitherto thought impossible for a dove.

AS SENATOR JACKSON remarked, "What is striking today is how markedly his positions in Senate testimony differ from what he has been saying publicly for the last eight years. Men change their minds. What is remarkable about this is its suddenness."

Scoop Jackson may have stumbled onto a way to convert all those longtime critics of his who never were much concerned about the threat from ever-growing Soviet arsenals, and who certainly weren't about to match Soviet efforts. Namely, nominate them for a high office that carries with it grave responsibilities for the nation's security. If they all followed Warnke's lead, and if one's nerves could tolerate it, the national security might be well served by paying them top dollar. For example, if only he followed Paul Warnke's example, George McGovern might make a formidable secretary of defense.

In contrast to Henry Jackson's controlled skepticism about the Warnke nomination, Barry Goldwater came right out with it. He said Paul Warnke's confirmation as the country's chief negotiator for disarmament could lead to World War III.

"I AM NOT CONCERNED about your individual opinions on this weapons system or that weapons system," Goldwater told Warnke in the hearing. "What bothers me, and bothers me deeply, is your seemingly total lack of concern with the Russian military build-up and the Soviet acquisition of government after government. In other words, I sense in your attitude . . . a position of weakness."

If Senator Goldwater senses that, what will the Soviets — with their delicate antennae and well developed penchant for searching out weak spots in others — pick up in Warnke? If the Soviets get the impression that they are indeed dealing with a weakened America, they may be tempted to go too far, and the result, as Senator Goldwater has said, could be The End.

Of course Barry Goldwater never was one to put things subtly. He has been known to overstate his case. Remember back in '64 when he was warning that the United States would sacrifice its blood and treasure in vain if it became involved piecemeal in Vietnam? Those who thought he was overstating his case then, including me, have since had occasion to reconsider. And when Goldwater now speaks of a third world war, an alarm bell should go off in the minds of those who remember his earlier and unhonored prophecy.

WHAT WILL THE Soviets make of an American negotiator who changes positions of years' standing under no greater pressure than a campaign to be confirmed for transient public office? Or is one to believe that Paul Warnke will prove tougher confronting Soviet negotiators than facing the Senate Armed Services Committee?

Of course a president of the United States should be allowed broad latitude in his appintees. See Griffin Bell. But in the case of some offices, like seats on the Supreme Court, it should be particularly well understood that a president is affecting not only his own administration but America's future — its security and principles.

In today's circumstances, with Soviet power outdistancing that of the United States in almost every conventional category, and overtaking a fast dwindling American lead in strategic weapons, it should be recognized that the post of chief arms negotiator is another of those that deeply affect the preservation of American security and American principles in the world. And that the Senate should confirm neither the new nor the old Paul Warnke for that post.

Committees don't cooperate

Congressional hearings consume cabinet's time

(Commentary)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At a recent breakfast in the White House, President Carter expressed his concern that members of the Cabinet and other top administration officials have to spend too much time on Capitol Hill.

Carter received sympathetic understanding from the congressional leaders who were meeting with him, but no promise that the shuttle up the hill will be any less crowded than in the past.

In fact, Carter and his Cabinet have yet to witness the peak period when congressional committees summon administration officials to testify.

A GOOD EXAMPLE as any of what bothers Carter occurred Thursday, Feb. 24.

On that day, Stcretary of State Cyrus Vance, Defense Secretary Harold Brown, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and Budget Director Bert Lance all had to troop up to Capitol Hill for varying periods to testify.

Vance testified before a Senate appropriations subcommittee on foreign aid programs in the next fiscal year. Brown appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee to explain defense reductions in the current year. Lance appeared before the Joint Economic Committee on Carter's revised budget. And Young talked to a House international relations subcommittee on the United Nations' participation act.

IN ADDITION, a number of lower-level government officials also were testifying in committee rooms spread among the Senate and House office buildings.

There will be days — as congressional committees consider legislation, authorizations and appropriations — when the number of top-level executive branch officials testifying will be even larger.

The one Cabinet member certain to spend a good deal of his time on Capitol Hill is Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

His predecessor, William Simon, complained that his many sessions before congressional committees was a major burden that left him struggling to find time for his own duties.

COMMITTEES ALWAYS insist on calling the top man in the department and Simon said many times a subordinate could have carried out the assignment just as well.

The root cause of the problem is Congress.

Not only is there a proliferation of committees and subcommittees but there is a near-absolute refusal for House and Senate panels to sit together and listen to a witness.

As a result, Brown not only explained Carter's cut in the Pentagon budget to the Senate Armed Services Committee, but he will have to repeat the reasoning to the House Armed Services Committee, the Senate Armed Services appropriations subcommittee and the House Armed Services appropriations subcommittee.

THE POSSIBILITY that these four panels could meet as one body to hear Brown and spare him three extra visits and many hours repeating what he has already said is totally foreign to the thinking of the Senate and House.

The Senate this year at least took a stab at consolidating jurisdiction so that all matters dealing with energy are shunted to the Energy and Interior Committee.

Last year, there were 17 committees and subcommittees dealing with some aspect of energy. In the House, responsibility for energy matters is still widespread.

As Assistant Democratic Leader Alan Cranston related the breakfast meeting, Carter was not only concerned about the time spent testifying but also about "often having to repeat the same testimony in different forums."

The best Carter could get was an assurance from Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd that the situation would be considered by the Policy Committee and Caucus.

Byrd indicated that it might be possible to alleviate the problem to some degree but even if it is, the fewer trips a Cabinet member has to make to Capitol Hill will be such a small reduction, Carter is hardly likely to notice.

Three views on abortion

Abortion is legal only because the Supreme Court says it is. However, the court can, and should, reverse its decision.

Under the Equal Rights Amendment, such reversal may not be possible.

The court found justification for abortion in the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment, and ruled that an unwanted pregnancy is an invasion of a woman's right to privacy as guaranteed by this clause. (But what about the right to life of the unborn?) Prior to this ruling, constitutional law expert Prof. T. I. Emerson, Yale Law School, stated the ERA is designed to protect women in all forms of rights, duties, and responsibilities, and that included in these is the "independent constitutional right of privacy."

Therefore, since a woman may now legally abort her unwanted baby as her right to privacy, and since the ERA would protect this right by the Constitution, the ERA would seal abortion into the constitution. Indeed, Betty Friedan, founder of the National Organization of Women, when asked about the relationship of ERA to abortion, replied: "As for reliance on future Supreme Courts (decisions), that's the reason we need ERA." Ms. Friedan knows that without ERA, the court can indeed reverse; but with ERA, it cannot.

Just a brief note to all the Gloria Hogbergs: Did you really read your letter you wrote to The Herald? My, you sound so "humane:" "Kill the baby at 8 weeks instead of letting it live for 9 months." It's smaller and it is easier to dispose of. I'm my parents 11th child and I am so glad they didn't kill me at 8 weeks. I feel I'm unique and very special. I was given the opportunity to live, think, feel and, yes, sometimes hurt.

Meat sales after 6 p.m. supported with bills before the legislature

by LEA TONKIN

Chicago area consumers may be able to buy fresh meat after 6 p.m. if legislation introduced in the Illinois General Assembly is successful.

Although labor union opposition has squelched previous contract bargaining and legislative attempts to allow Chicago area night meat sales, State Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, D-Chicago, said public pressure will improve the prospects for her bill, S.B. 17. The bill would require that no labor contracts restrict the sale of necessities when a store is open for business.

Under the terms of a three-year contract signed by Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen for butchers in the Northwest suburbs and the rest of the Chicago region, sales of fresh meat after 6 p.m. are not allowed. A new contract will be negotiated in September.

"The Chicago area is the only area in the country with such a provision," Sen. Netsch said. She said local consumers are "enormously handicapped" by the meat sales restriction. Families in whicih all adults work and senior citizens who depend on working friends for transportation to the stores are disadvantaged by the restricted sales hours, she said.

Hearings on SB 17 will be slated in the Senate labor and commerce subcommittee.

A similar bill — H.348 — introduced by State Rep. Dan O'Brien, D-Chicago, has been assigned to the House labor and commerce committee for consideration. Rep. O'Brien, calling for consumer support of his bill, said union objections to the night meat sales are "all hogwash."

MEAT CUTTER Bob Moran, right, at the Arlington Packing Co., Arlington Heights, is among the butchers opposed to night meat sales.

"Lifestyles are changing," O'Brien said. "There are families where both the mother and father are working, and they don't get off work until after 5 p.m." O'Brien said bipartisan support for H.348 includes approximately 20 cosponsors.

Although the Jewel food stores and other firms have supported night meat sales proposals in the past, court decisions have held that the issue should be settled hrough collective bargaining.

One butcher who would like to continue banning night meat sales is Bob Moran, manager of the Arlington Packing Co., Inc. shop at 119 W. Campbell Ave., Arlington Heights.

"Speaking as a meat cutter, one of the main things is that butchers have a family to go home to after 6 o'clock," Moran said. Late shifts to serve evening customers would mean higher operating costs, he said.

Home delivery is an alternative to store purchases, Moran said. "I'd like to see it like it was years ago, when businesses shut down at night. If we got back to family unity, this would be a lot better place to live," Moran said.

"Stores should be closed after 6. People have got more than enough hours to shop," said Norb Chmura, owner of Meeske's Super Market, 101 S. Main, Mount Prospect. A member of Local 189 in the butchers union, Chmura said he also disapproves of Sunday meat sales proposals. The issue of night meat sales will be considered in September contract talks, he said.

Changing patterns in work hours and the retail industry have led to increased hours of operation for many businesses, said Len Day, labor relations specialist in the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, Chicago. "There is the classic argument that this question is a matter between the employer and employes," Day said of the meat sales issue. "It will be raised again.

"I would counter that if it takes corrective legislation for the collective good of the larger community, then it must be legislated," Day said.

"A memo never begins, 'To whom it may concern'!"

Crude oil price cut 45c a barrel

The Federal Energy Administration, acknowledging it was taking a fairly drastic step to soak up excess oil industry profits, Wednesday rolled back the price for so-called "new" domestic crude oil by 45 cents a barrel. FEA officials said the rollback — the third in 13 months — is designed to cure a problem created by the agency's regulations and will remain in effect through the end of July. They said it should have little or no impact on consumers. In a related development, the American Petroleum Institute said U.S. oil imports last week climbed above 10 million barrels per day for the first time in the nation's history. Oil producers say domestic price ceilings have held back U.S. production, driving imports higher than necessary.

General Foods coffee up to $3.71

General Foods Corp., the nation's largest coffee roaster, Wednesday boosted wholesale prices on ground coffee by 40 cents to a record $3.71 a pound and raised the list price of soluble brands from 10 to 18 cents an ounce. The General Foods pricing action, effective immediately, marked the third increase on its ground coffee within 30 days. The company last raised prices on its soluble coffees Dec. 16. In White Plains, N.Y., a General Foods spokesman attributed the latest price hike to a 388 per cent rise in the average price of green beans since a frost destroyed 73.5 per cent of Brazil's 1976 coffee crop.

Cheap Jeep sale a hoax: Scott

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott Wednesday warned consumers a widespread rumor that surplus Army Jeeps are being sold by the U.S. government for $100 or $125 is false. Scott said the rumor was spread quickly throughout the Midwest via CB radios and word of mouth but "a check by our office with the Defense Property Disposal Agency indicates no such Jeep offer is being made." Scott said persons interested in the bogus deal are asked only their names and Social Security numbers. "If the thousands of names and Social Security numbers flow into the hands of knowledgeable computer fraud operators, all types of confidential information could be obtained. The information obtained could lead to theft or blackmail," Scott said.

Broiler chicken prices to drop

Broiler chicken prices, which rose more than expected early this year because of the record cold weather, are likely to decline in the next few months, the U.S. Agriculture Dept. says. Wholesale prices in February fluctuated from 39 to 44 cents a pound, but increasing production and more competition from pork are expected to bring the January-June six-month average down to the upper 30s, economists said in a poultry and egg situation report.

Cold hurts transportation system

The winter of 1977 dealt the nation's transportation system its most costly blow in history, a transportation official said at a meeting in Chicago Wednesday. Richard Jackson, president of the Mississippi Valley Conference of State Highway Departments, told representatives of 14 states that the coldest winter in 100 years "has dealt the most costly single blow the U.S. transportation system has ever received."

Porpoise-killing ban bad: U.S.

The Justice Dept. told the U.S. Court of Appeals that its order to stop tuna fishermen from accidentally killing porpoises created unemployment and higher prices and threatens to destroy the industry. The department urged the Washington, D.C., appeals court to begin this week to review interim orders it issued Feb. 18 that were designed to stop the fishing method that kills porpoises instead of the more limited restraint that Justice lawyers wanted. The court has not made a complete review of U.S. District Judge Charles Richey's ruling that the method violates the Marine Mammal Protection Act.

Newspaper strike settled

A legal agreement reached today following a marathon court session apparently cleared the way for settling the 23-day strike at the Philadelphia Inquirer and Daily News. U.S. District Court Judge Herbert A. Fogel announced the agreement involving fines and penalties for four unions, who defied a court order and refused to cross picket lines set up by editorial and business employes, members of Local 10 of The Newspaper Guild. The announcement followed a 15-hour court session that was attended by all parties in the dispute.

Inflation still lurking in the wings

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Don't look now, but America's No. 1 economic problem has not gone away.

Inflation, although temporarily out of favor as a headline topic, is lurking in the wings waiting to make a dramatic reentry, just as soon as the audience fully relaxes and turns its attention elsewhere.

There is evidence much of the audience is getting ready to do just that. Press and politicians seem preoccupied with the spurious question of "how much" government stimulation the economy needs or, to put it another way, how little we ought to be worrying about the continuing tendency of Washington to inflate.

The unmistakable lesson of such endless inflation — that it leads inexorably to economic collapse and far worse unemployment than it was intended to prevent — has been chipped in stone for decades.

CONGRESS GOES on worrying the headline-making (and troublemaking) bone of how much bigger to make President Carter's proposed public-works programs even though such programs have been demonstrated repeatedly to be temporary palliatives at best, with a permanent impact only on inflation.

The statistics, showing inflation has not vanished, get explained away smoothly. Did the consumer price index just take its biggest leap in 18 months? Well, the weather, you know, has been terrible. Is inflation, even in the present post-recession trough, still rising dangerously higher than our historical norms? You old-fashioned person, you're worrying about last year's problem.

Contracts covering 4.9 million workers expire this year, covering such key fields as basic steel, construction, telephone communications, bituminous coal, railroads and retail food. Does anyone think that the trend of these negotiations will include a statesmanlike effort to combat inflation.

Too many businessmen, all too painfully aware of the impact of inflation on their own businesses, seek less government only when it is immediately convenient. Deregulation and ending of subsidies is fine for others but our business, you see, has special problems and special needs.

The American memory span is wondrously short, but by now even we should be able to retain the fear of a renewal of double-digit inflation. Even we should know that when government runs wild, it brings neither prosperity nor stable prices, that sound growth of the private economy has been the key to improving the well-being of the mass of the citizenry.

It is sometimes hard to remember this, because it differs from so much of the rhetoric now being featured on the nightly news, but there will be no way to escape the penalties if we forget.

Dow loses 2 pts., closes at 942

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market ran out of steam Wednesday and prices fell for the first time in three days in slow trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, up and down throughout the morning, lost 2.66 points to 942.07. The blue-chip average had gained 11.30 points the previous two sessions, including 8.31 Tuesday.

The NYSE common stock index lost 0.12 to 54.56 and the average price of a common share decreased eight cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter stocks, added 0.27 to 100.39.

Declines topped advances, 688 to 671, among the 1,850 issues crossing the composite tape. The 491 unchanged issues reflected considerable investor uncertainty.

Big board volume totaled 18,010,000 shares, compared with 19,480,000 traded Tuesday, when trading was delayed more than an hour by a fire.

Yankee tourist feared death in Uganda jail

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — An American tourist jailed in Uganda by President Idi Amin for three nights Wednesday said he was certain he would be killed.

"I was pretty sure I would be bumped off," Brian Schwartz, 24-year-old Yale Law School graduate from New York City, told a press conference. "I was thinking, 'Gee, I hope it won't hurt so much.' "

His statement came as Amin said an invasion force of 2,600 American, British and Israeli mercenaries are marching through Kenya toward Ugdanda. His claim raised new fears for the safety of Americans.

Schwartz said he entered Uganda Feb. 24, the day before Amin issued orders barring all Americans from leaving the country. He said he was arrested two days later by two Ugandan Army military police while sipping a beer in a Kampala bar.

"THE MPs SHOUTED for me to come out and aimed their machine guns at me," he said. "I thought, 'Oh, my God! This is it.' "

At one stage, four policemen bundled him into a car and drove him to an alleyway for some 20 minutes.

"I thought I was about to be bumped off," he said. "But they eventually took me to Kampala's central police station."

Schwartz said he was questioned by "some of the most evil-looking men I have ever seen" who were carrying submachine guns. However, he said he "was never physically beaten or tortured."

HE SAID HE WAS concerned "they might try and set me up as a CIA agent" but that didn't happen.

Schwartz said on the first night of his imprisonment three drunken soldiers entered his cell and it "appeared they wanted to beat up some prisoners. They questioned me for 10 minutes. We spoke in French. Then they went away."

He said he heard the next morning the soldiers had beaten up some African prisoners.

SCHWARTZ SAID an undisclosed number of tourists of other nationalities still were being held in the Kampala jail. He declined to give their nationalities but said their embassies had been informed.

The following morning four persons armed with submachine guns came to get Schwartz. He said they squeezed his genitals, apparently searching him, and took him to an isolated garden in Kampala for questioning.

"I was rather concerned to be taken to a garden with four men armed with machine guns," he said.

Schwartz said he finally alerted outside authorities to his plight by wrapping a bank slip with his name on it around a Kenya shilling and hurling it through the bars of his cell to a Canadian tourist he knew slightly who was passing by at the time.

Schwartz said he never was told of any charges. "I guess I happened to be in the wrong place when the wrong military policeman passed by."

He said he still had no idea why he was arrested and "I don't know why they released me."

Backup draft urged to buoy volunteer army

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The all-volunteer armed forces is failing and should be strenghtened by a backup draft system and a new program of national service, according to a special report released Wednesday to a Senate subcommittee.

Calling the all-volunteer plan "a sinking ship that is becoming increasingly costly to keep afloat," the report said the Army and the Marine Corps are experiencing recruiting shortfalls of 6 per cent and 15 per cent and the situation is expected to get worse.

The study estimated it would cost "an astonishing $29 billion" more to increase troop strength to Vietnam War levels through volunteers rather than draftees.

THE REPORT was written by Dr. William R. King, professor of business administration at the University of Pittsburgh, for the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on manpower and personnel.

King said his preliminary study "has led me to conclude that a reserve-only draft and-or the institution of a backup draft would be beneficial to the nation."

A "minimally coercive" national service program "could be implemented on a decentralized basis . . . for about an additional $8 billion net outlay each year," King said.

KING PREDICTED "very grave recruiting difficulties" for the present all-volunteer system because of a declining 18-year-old male population and an improved national employment picture.

He said so many recruits are being discharged that "today's all-volunteer force could be characterized as a revolving door which takes in young people and turns many of them back into the streets labeled as 'rejects.' "

President Carter said Tuesday he does not favor resuming the draft, but that he would do so if he believed the nation's security depended upon it.

HAWK NETMINDER Tony Esposito (35) inspects the goal after Buffalo's Brian Spencer came crashing through on a breakaway attempt. Esposito made the save, but the Sabres win, 6-3. The Black Hawks, four points off the pace of St. Louis, missed an opportunity to gain on the Blues.

Lorentz is tricky; Sabres slice Hawks

Jim Lorentz fired in a goal in each of the three periods Wednesday night to spark the Buffalo Sabres to a 6-3 National Hockey League victory over the Black Hawks.

The hat trick gave the versatile right winger 19 goals for the season and helped boost the Sabres five points ahead of Boston in the Adams Division standings.

Lorentz scored the game's opening goal at 11:16 on a 15 foot slap shot. His second, at 3:14 of the second period, brought Buffalo into a 2-2 tie following Black Hawks' goals by Darcy Rota and Stan Mikita.

DANNY GARE, Gil Perreault and Craig Ramay scored for the Sabres before Lorentz whipped in a 25-foot slap shot for his third goal. Mikita scored his second of the game to close out the scoring at 10:33.

In other NHL games Wednesday night, Garry Monahan tipped in a rebound from Hilliard Graves' shot with five minutes to play to give Vancouver a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Flames.

Atlanta opened the scoring midway through the first period. The Flames had four rapid-fire shots on Canucks' goalie Cesare Maniago and Bobby Simpson put the fourth past Maniago to put the Flames up 1-0.

Vancouver tied it at 1-1 with 24 seconds to play in the second period. Dennis Ververgaert fired a five-foot wrist shot past Atlanta goalie Phil Myre on a Canucks' power play.

LEFT WING Bob Girard scored two goals to lead the Cleveland Barons to their second straight victory, a 4-1 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Girard scored his first goal on Cleveland's initial shot on goal in the game at 6:09 of the opening period. After eluding the Toronto defense, Girard broke in alone on rookie Leafs goalie Mike Palmateer. Girard tallied his second goal and eighth this season at 3:45 of the second session, putting the Barons ahead 3-0.

Although Toronto peppered Cleveland netminder Gary Edwards with 18 shots in the first period, Cleveland was up 2-0 after Juha Widing scored at 13:10.

Errol Thompson broke up Edwards' shutout six minutes after Girard's second goal. Rick Hampton's goal for Cleveland seven minutes into the third period closed out the scoring and gave Toronto its third loss in a row.

Los Angeles goalie Rogie Vachon earned his seventh shutout of the season as the Kings moved within two points of Pittsburgh in he battle for second place in the National Hockey League's Norris Division with a 5-0 victory over the Penguins.

Don Kozak scored two goals and an assist as the Kings, playing their fourth game in five nights, extended their unbeaten streak to seven games (6-0-1). The Kings, 10 points behind the Penguins as recently as Feb. 12, are 9-4-2 in their last 15 games.

Nelson Pyatt scored one goal and assisted on Wilf Paiement's gamewinner with 19 seconds remaining Wednesday night to give the Colorado Rockies a 2-2 tie with the St. Louis Blues.

St. Michael dealt setback in protest

A hearing officer ruled against St. Michael High School Wednesday, and the Warriors' effort to gain reinstatement in the Illinois Class A basketball tournament now will go before a circuit court judge.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Joseph Wosik scheduled a hearing for 10:30 a.m. today to try to resolve the impasse which has stalled the Somonauk sectional tournament.

Don Trimble, principal of Rich South High School who is serving as hearing officer for the Illinois High School Assn., heard testimony Wednesday concerning Walther Lutheran's disputed 67-66 victory over St. Michael in Friday's regional finals. He ruled "the game score at 67 for Walther Lutheran and 66 for St. Michael should stand as approved by the game officials."

ST. MICHAEL had contended that Walther Lutheran benefited from two points on an illegal basket and actually scored only 65 points in the game. Testimony from tournament supervisor Arnold Hoving supporting this position was presented to Trimble.

But Trimble upheld rule 2, section 11, of the National Federation rules which reads "if the discrepancy is in the score, and the error is not resolved, the eferee shall accept the progressive team totals of the official score book."

Trimble said the referee "accepted the progressive team totals and I do not find that in the light of the foregoing circumstances that rule 5, section 3, clearly compels the conclusion that St. Michael had 'accumulated the greater number of points when the game ends' notwithstanding that this is indeed a possibility."

IHSA Executive Secretary Harry Fitzhugh said he would convey Trimble's report immediately for action by the board of directors and that he would be present in court Thursday with the directors' decision.

Bulls tip Suns for fifth straight

PHOENIX — Guard Wilber Holland capped a 26-point performance with a steal and layup to lead the Bulls to a 108-104 overtime victory against the Phoenix Suns Wednesday night.

Holland had six points in the overtime period, including the layup off the steal that put Chicago ahead 106-102 with 40 seconds left. Norm Van Lier added two free throws with eight seconds remaining.

ARTIS GILMORE finished with 23 points for Chicago and rookie Scott May with 20, four in the overtime period. Westphal led Phoenix in scoring with 26 points, followed by Ricky Sobers with 15 and Adams and Ira Terrell with 14 each.

A 19-foot jump shot by Keith Erickson with one second left in regulation time tied the score at 96-96, the 11th deadlock of the game. Chicago had led 95-90 with one-minute left but baskets by Alvan Adams and Paul Westphal cut the margin to 95-94 with 23 seconds left and the Suns fouled Gilmore, who made only one of two foul shots at the eight second mark.

ELSEWHERE IN the NBA Wednesday night, Sam Lacey's 20 points and 11 rebounds led a balanced Kansas City attack as the Kings defeated the sluggish New York Nets, 112-100.

A Phil Chenier jump shot with nine seconds remaining in overtime gave the Washington Bullets a 115-113 victory over the Denver Nuggets.

Moses Malone scored a season-high 26 points and combined with Kevin Kunnert to dominate the middle against Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and carry Houston to a 120-113 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Indiana Pacers, led by Billy Knight's 27 points, put five players in double figures to defeat Buffalo, 116-108, despite Randy Smith's 41 points in a losing cause.

Zisk ponders future

Morales for Money?

SUN CITY, Ariz. — Milwaukee Brewers general manager Jim Baumer said Wednesday he had turned down an offer from the Cubs for an even trade of Chicago outfielder Jerry Morales for Brewers third baseman Don Money.

The Cubs are looking for a third baseman to replace Bill Madlock, who was recently traded to the San Francisco Giants.

The Brewers are still talking with the Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates about possible player deals. Joe L. Brown, general consultant for the Pirates, was at the camp Tuesday reportedly to look at Money, as the Pirates also need a third baseman.

In on-field developments Wednesday, Brewers outfielder Gorman Thomas narrowly escaped serious injury when he lost his balance while chasing a fly ball and crashed into a concrete wall in left-center field. Thomas hit the low wall chest-high, avoiding a head injury, the Brewers trainer said.

IN SARASOTA, FLA., meanwhile, outfielder Richie Zisk said Wednesday he is beginning to wonder if the White Sox really have a place for him in their future.

Puzzled at the club's apparent lack of interest in reaching a quick contract agreement, Zisk said, "I honestly don't think they're going to try to sign me. Maybe they want a rent-a-player this year."

Club President Bill Veeck said only, "I don't discuss salaries or signings. What the athletes say are their business."

A squad of 37 roster members held its second three-hour workout Wednesday and only Francisco Barrios, a righthanded pitcher, remained an absentee. Barrios lives in Mexico.

Finalists

Regional championships next for survivors

PALATINE center Doug Buenzow pops in a bucket over Rolling Meadows' Tom Hopkins Wednesday in the Regional tournament action. Palatine advanced, 55-51.

The March Madness bug struck again Wednesay night. Five regional contests unfolded throughout the area with the winners — Palatine, Arlington, St. Viator, Elk Grove and Fremd — reserving a spot in Friday's title games.

Pirates pull upset

Palatine survived a late game scoring drought and a frenetic stretch rush by Rolling Meadows Wednesday night to post a 55-51 upset victory over the top-seeded Mustangs in the semifinals of the Palatine Regional.

Kevin McKenna, Palatine's versatile big man, led the Pirates to victory with 27 points and a solid all-around performance.

Palatine's second victory in the regional advances the Pirates to Friday night's 7:30 p.m. championship contest against Fremd.

THE STEADILY-improving Pirates jumped off to an early 6-0 lead and maintained the upperhand throughout most of the first half.

Palatine led 14-8 after the first quarter, with McKenna contributing six points.

The Mustangs, who were seemingly taken off balance at the outset, opened the second quarter by scoring five unanswered points to move to within 14-13.

The two teams traded baskets before the Pirates ran off eight straight points of their own for a 25-15 advantage.

MUSTANG GUARD Bob Rose was fouled, while attempting to shoot at the buzzer and made one of two free throws to cut the Pirate lead by one, 25-16, going into the locker room.

Palatine relied on its team-oriented defense to establish the early tempo, which prevented the Mustangs from getting the easy shot.

The second half, however, was a different game, as the Mustangs came out more aggressive on defense with three-quarter court pressure. In turn, the Mustangs became more effective in their overall play.

WITH 3:59 REMAINING in the third quarter, Palatine held a 32-23 lead. By the quarter's end, however, the Mustangs had outscored the host school, 9-4, and trailed by only a basket, 36-34.

The final quarter was a see-saw affair with each team making several charges at the other.

Meadows evened the score on Kevin Kiley's foul line jumper following the tip.

Palatine countered with six straight points for a 42-36 lead, before going nearly two minutes without a point. In that time, the Mustangs managed two baskets to trail by 7.

LEADING 51-42 with 2:39 left to play, Palatine fell victim to the Mustang pressure and committed several turnovers, which Meadows converted into baskets.

With Kiley already on the bench with his fifth personal foul, Meadows continued its charge at Palatine before finally being forced to foul, in order to retain possession. Kent Walker and Krutwig also fouled out in the process, as Doug Buenzow made three of four late free throws to seal the victory for Palatine.

"They did a nice job of pressuring us down the stretch," said Palatine coach Ed Molitor of the late game rally by Rolling Meadows. "We were able to get by with some clutch foul shooting and, of course, the play of McKenna."

"He's done everything we've asked of him, including handling the ball on the press, which he did so well in the fourth quarter."

Zobel's hot hand propels Cards

by KEITH REINHARD

He might just as well have dropped from the rafters, resplendent in cape and mask, and with a quick swish-swish-swish from his epee, slashed the familiar Z in every Hersey uniform.

The mark of Zobel.

Jim Zobel didn't do it that way but his actions on the floor produced the same result: A see-saw 58-53 victory for his Arlington club over the Huskies in semifinal regional action on the Forest View hardwood Wednesday night.

THE 6-1 SENIOR utility man wasn't a starter through most of the season and had only played his first complete game last week at Elk Grove. He went the route against Hersey and bagged seven of his 13 total points during the crucial fourth quarter when the Huskies were threatening.

"It was kind of a streaky game," Redbird coach George Zigman explained afterwards. "We played very poorly in stretches but part of the blame for that is the fact that Hersey played well . . . they came out scrapping tonight."

Indeed they did. The Huskies jumped ahead 8-2 and were up 12-6 when the Cards ran off a string of 13 straight points. Hersey came back on a pair of backboard jumpers by Gary Meyer and T. R. Frye to close the gap to 23-22 but Zobel countered with a pair of buckets then and by halftime Arlington was up 34-26.

Most of period three was spent in the Arlington deep freeze although the Cardinals did manage to improve their lead to 46-32 in between back court passes.

THEN IT WAS Hersey's turn to run hot. They reeled off 11 straight after Mark Miesfeldt's three-point play triggered the surge and quickly trimmed the gap to 48-45.

That's when Zobel went to work. "If they fouled Jim hoping to get the ball back, they picked the wrong player," Zigman said. "He's one of the best free throw shooters on our team."

How right the coach was. Zobel hit five-of-five from the line including a pair at the :27 mark that cemented the win. Frank DeSimone contributed 17 and Greg Kloiber 14 to assure the Cards a berts in Friday's 7:30 championship game.

Kuhn promises prompt ruling

GRAPEVINE, Tex. — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn listened to almost three hours of testimony Wednesday from officials of the Oakland A's and Texas Rangers without making a final judgment on which club owns the rights to relief pitcher Paul Lindblad.

Kuhn said he hoped to make a ruling "promptly," so that Lindblad could begin training with either the A's or Texas Rangers.

But Kuhn said the principle issue of the hearing Wednesday was not which club owned Lindblad, but whether A's owner Charles O. Finley was purposely selling off players in an attempt to liquidate his club.

"I have to decide whether it is indeed part of the Oakland A's plan for the future to liquidate the team," said Kuhn. "That is the matter before me. At this time I think I have enough of a record before me on which I could make a determination of that matter."

Wolves need win for NCAA berth

CHICAGO (UPI) — Michigan, ranked No. 3 nationally, needs only one win to insure a berth in the NCAA tournament and clinch a tie for the Big Ten basketball title — and Illinois Coach Lou Henson fears these facts will make the Wolverines tougher to beat in a possible decisive contest.

The Wolverines, 14-2 in the conference with a one-game edge on Minnesota, 13-3, and two over Purdue, 12-4, play at Illinois Thursday, seeking a second win this season over the Illini.

Illinois, 6-10 in the Big Ten, lost at Michigan 66-61, but later rebounded to defeat Purdue by one point and in the last game lost at Minnesota by only two points, 72-70.

A decision will be made Sunday by the NCAA whether the Big Ten should have two teams in the field of 32. Purdue was the only logical second choice since no other eligible teams are over .500 for the conference season. If Purdue and Michigan tie and the Big Ten gets only one tournament berth, they would play off for the tournament chance at Illinois March 8.

Umpires ratify new contract

TAMPA, Fla. — The Major League Umpires Association Wednesday ratified a five-year agreement with the American and National Leagues, ending a dispute that had been going on since the end of the 1976 season.

With 48 umpires in the Association — 24 in each league — as soon as the 25th affirmative vote was cast, an Association spokesman notified N.L. president Charles "Chub" Feeney and A.L. president Lee MacPhail.

Salary was a principal point of argument and the umpires won a raise from a minimum of $15,000 to $16,500.

Soviets dominate pairs skating

TOKYO — Irina Rodnina and Aleksandr Zaitzev of the Soviet Union Wednesday won their fifth successive world championship in the pairs competition with a dazzling free skating performance on the second day of the 1977 world figure skating championship.

The Russian pair received nine ordinals and 140.50 points after a performance which combined technical excellence, grace, and near perfect synchronization.

In second place despite a bad fall and several errors were Russians Irina Vorobieva and Aleksandr Vlasov, European runners-up and last year's world bronze medal winners, with 23-136.16.

American champions Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner of California skated their way to the third spot with 29-135.65 after an artistic, crowd-pleasing performance in which they remained in unison throughout.

Nadia not perfect; tour postponed

NEW YORK — Nadia Comaneci, a three gold medal winner in the 1976 Olympics, was reported ailing by the Romanian government Wednesday and may not accompany the national team for the scheduled March 12-13 American Cup gymnastics competition at Madison Square Garden.

A five-city tour that was to include exhibitions in Philadelphia, Washington, Chicago, Hartford, Conn., and Birmingham, Ala., was postponed, reportedly because of 15-year-old Nadia's illness.

The Romanian government advised the American ambassador in Bucharest that the tour had been cancelled and that perhaps it would be rescheduled in the fall.

Ugandan Olympic champ arrested

NAIROBI — John Akii-Bua, Uganda's former world record holder in the 400 meter hurdles and gold medal winner at the Munich Olympic Games, Wednesday became the latest casualty in his country's ongoing political turmoil when he was arrested by Uganda security forces.

Akii-Bua is a member of the Langi tribe which has been the target of frequent purges in Uganda during the regime of Presi-

Bjorn Borg puts foot down

Zuccarini chosen to CSL stars

Bob Zuccarini of Maine West was named to the 10-player Central Suburban League all-conference team this week, while teammate Pete Karabas was honorable mention.

Senior Zuccarini, who has led the Warriors in scoring the last two seasons, is currently averaging 14.7 points per game. He is maintaining an 80 per cent clip at the free throw line and is hitting 46 per cent from the floor.

"He's a boy that plays both ends of the floor," Maine West coach Gaston Freeman said. "In my 29 years of coaching, he's one of the great athletes I've seen. He comes to play ball every game."

ZUCCARINI HAS BEEN an all-conference choice in football and baseball, as well. He was named to the Herald's All Area honorable mention football team in 1976. He will be attending Western Michigan University next fall.

Zuccarini, 6-foot-3 and 180 pounds, averaged 14.7 points per game last season, while leading the team. He has been a forward this season.

Senior Karabas holds a 14.0 scoring average, second behind Zuccarini. Also 6-foot-3, Karabas has had to match up against many bigger centers this season.

"Karabas is an excellent shooter, probably one of the best leapers in the conference," Freeman said. "He wasn't beaten on the jump ball all season."

SOUTH DIVISION champion Maine East led the all-conference team in the number of picks. Scott Russ, Dexter Brown and Mark Manbeck made their way to the select squad, while teammate Larry Wayland was tabbed honorable mention.

Other all-conference picks were: Russ Schmelzer and Tom Barr of Maine South, Mike Shunick of Glenbrook South, Howard Lapping of Niles North, and Bill Chinetti and Bob Brodell of Glenbrook North.

Other honorable mention selections were: Rick Sovick of Niles North, Rick Smith of Maine South, Mike Sexton of Glenbrook South and John Anastos of Niles West.

Name Wiloff to ESCC star team

St. Viator's Paul Wiloff has been named to the 10-man East Suburban Catholic All-Conference team.

Wiloff, a 67-7 junior center, leads the Lions in scoring with a 19-point average. He also leads the league in rebounding with a 12-rebound average.

Wiloff's high scoring game of the season was a 33-point performance against Quigley South.

LION GUARD Steve Notaro was named to the Honorable Mention ESCC All-Conference team. Notaro, who's missed the last eight Viator games and is out for the season with hepatitis, was the team's second leading scorer with a 12 point average and was team captain. The senior has been a two-year starter for St. Viator.

Holy Cross led the league with five players named to the All-Conference and Honorable Mention squads.

Two Crusaders were named to All-Conference team, including Randy Okrezesik who's the league leading scorer with a 20-point average.

Three members of the Holy Cross team were named to the second team.

OKREZESIK WAS the top vote getter among ESCC coaches for the All-Conference team.

Elk Grove formula– fast start

by BOB RICHARDS

It's no fun to surrender an 18-4 lead and Mark Smith helped make sure it didn't happen to Elk Grove Wednesday as he hit nine of 15 field goal attempts, had eight steals and grabbed seven rebounds to lead the Grens to a 65-49 regional victory over Lake Park.

Smith, who bagged 24 points, led all scorers in the tourney opener for both teams. Elk Grove earned a date in the title game Friday with Maine West which knocked off top-seeded Maine North on Monday.

The Grens started quickly after falling behind 2-0 and reeled off 16 straight points, leading after the first stanza 18-4.

Elk Grove's 16-point surge in the first quarter was begun by Tim Mimnaugh who hit a layup and then a free throw. He was followed by a pair of buckets by Smith, a free throw by Kevin McCloughan, a field goal by Marc Evans and buckets by McCloughan and Mimnaugh.

From there it was what coach Ken Grams called a cerebral approach to the sport as the Grenadiers tried to play it smart to minimize mistakes.

"I think that was as mentally alert as we have played in quite a while," he said, referring to his team's poise with the big lead.

LAKE PARK did close to 22-15 midway through the second period as 6-4 forward Mike Loesher began asserting himself underneath. Then late in the third period, the Lancers cut the margin to 42-37, but Mimnaugh, Smith and Evans hit unanswered buckets in a 57 second span to ice it for Elk Grove. Mimnaugh had 12 points and Evans 10 for the evening.

"Getting off to the nice start sure did help," Grams said. "The clock was on our side.

"I think we rebounded well. We didn't have anyone tall out there besides Smith. We'll have to maintain the same kind of rebounding on Friday," he added. Lake Park had 30 rebounds to Elk Grove's 23.

THE GRENS built their final victory margin of 16 points early in the fourth quarter and then held it as subs came in on both sides.

Lake Park had entered the game at 16-8 including a 4-4 mark in the O'Hare Suburban. Elk Grove goes into its title game at 12-13.

Viator, Wiloff pound Forest View

by BOB GALLAS

The St. Viator Lions overcame first half jitters to become the winningest basketball team in the school's history Wednesday night with a 72-49 win over the host Forest View Falcons.

The win, Viator's 16th against 10 losses, sets up a meeting between the Lions and Arlington Friday night for the Forest View Regional title.

The much taller Lions had trouble getting started against the Falcons who trailed by only one point with 2½ minutes left in the first half when Viator's terrific twosome of 6-7 center Paul Wiloff and 6-4 forward Paul Rogozinski combined for eight straight points that helped the Lions to hold a 29-22 lead at intermission.

"WE DIDN'T dominate, as we should have in the first half, so we made some changes," said Viator assistant coach Tom Mueller, who was conducting the post game analysis. "We went to a different offense that picked for Wiloff and got him wide open."

Wiloff got open, picking up 14 of his game high 26 points in the second half, but so did Rogozinski, who cashed in 12 of his 17 game points in the final half.

"I was a little nervous to start out and just had to calm down," said Wiloff, who like Rogozinski, is a junior. "This was a really big game for us."

Wiloff also dominated on the boards, picking up 15 rebounds. The Lions outboarded Forest View 34-20, and closed out a 9-16 year for the Falcons.

THE LIONS blew the game open at the outset of the second half when they outscored Forest View 14-2 to take a commanding 43-24 lead with 2:56 left in the third quarter.

The hot-handed Viator squad shot with more than 53 per cent accuracy from the floor, connecting on 31 of 58 shots from the field. The Falcons hit on 18 of 45 attempts, 40 per cent accuracy.

The Falcons' leading scorer, 6-3 Jeff Martinski, had his troubles going up against Wiloff, who held Martinski to just three points in the first half. Martinski, who's averaging about 14 points per game, finished with 11 for the night. Jim Kennedy led the Forest View scorers with 13 points, 10 of which came in the second quarter.

Vikings hold off Saxons

by ART MUGALIAN

A pair of Dales, Hallberg and Kukla, helped Fremd open up a close game in the second quarter and the Vikings fended off a late Schaumburg rally to advance, 53-41, in the Palatine Regional Wednesday night.

The workmanlike win, Fremd's 12th in the last 17 games, moved the Vikings into Friday's title game against Palatine, a winner over Rolling Meadows earlier Wednesday.

FREMD, NOW 14-10, was slow out of the gate, but managed to grab a 15-11 lead after one quarter on the shooting of Craig Rawlins and his junior brother, Scott. Craig was the game's high scorer with 17.

Sophomore reserve forward George Tuzil and junior guard Jack Breen, Schaumburg's top scorer with 16 points, kept the Saxons in the game early while Fremd shut off 6-7 center John Chmiel, holding him to a season low of 10.

Schaumburg, which closed the season at 6-21, trailed by only six with 4:05 left in the first half when Kukla hit two free throws for Fremd. Following a basket by Viking sub Tony Marasco, Kukla scored underneath on a fast-break assist from Hallberg.

Hallberg next located Marasco inside for a two-pointer and a 31-19 advantage, then Hallberg scored his own fast-break bucket for two of his 10 points on the night.

TUZIL AND CHMIEL popped in consecutive baskets before Kukla closed the half with a 20-footer and a 35-23 edge.

Fremd spent most of the second half trying to force Schaumburg out of a tight zone defense, turning the game into a fans' nightmare.

"The first time, we ran down about two or two-and-a-half minutes," said Fremd coach Mo Tharp. "Then we got the layup. That's what we wanted to do. It's just that we didn't take full advantage of it."

The Saxons, however, did prosper from Fremd's lackadaisical play, finally closing to within four points, 43-39, on a driving basket by Breen at 6:52 of the fourth quarter. But baskets by Scott Rawlins and Hallberg padded the lead before Craig Rawlins' three-point play at the buzzer sent the crowd home.

Green, Thompson leading selections on Big 10 team

Michigan's Rickey Green and Minnesota's Michael Thompson were unanimous selections Wednesday on the All-Big Ten basketball team picked for United Press International by the 10 conference coaches.

Indiana's Kent Benson, making the team for the third straight year, missed unanimity by one point, placed on the second team by one coach. It was the second consecutive year that Green and Thompson have made the team.

Completing the first team was Michigan's Phil Hubbard and Purdue's Walter Jordan.

Named to the second team were Greg Kelser of Michigan State, Mike Woodson, an Indiana freshman, Ray Williams of Minnesota, Bruce King of Iowa, and Billy McKinney of Northwestern.

Bowl declined

Rutgers, which finished the 1976 college football season with a 11-0 record and a tie for 15th in UPI National rankings, declined an invitation to play the post-season Independence Bowl Game. Baylor, tied for 17th in the rankings but uninvited to a bowl, was the only other team in the UPI's top 20 that did not appear in a post-season game.

Worst record

The Montreal Expos had the worst record in major league baseball in 1976, with 55-107 for a .340 percentage. They finished 46 games behind the leading Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East.

attorney, said the hearing officer "totally disregarded most of the evidence."

"His report has weight, but I don't know whether the judge will consider it. It's obviously erroneous."

Grivetti said he thought the dispute should be "solved in court," and that 'it would have been resolved if the referee had taken the time to check the score book after the third quarter."

Grivetti said it is "not our intention to stop the state tournament forever," indicating St. Michael might withdraw from further prosecution of its complaints should Wosik rule against the school.

Grivetti said St. Michael still wanted the game or any part of it replayed.

HOVING SAID the official scorer of the game, George Bosman, after the referee and umpire had left the floor, found the score to be 66-65 for St. Michael, "and the scorer decided he had forgotten to put in the last basket so he added it to Solomon Smith's individual total to make the scores tally."

The scoreboard showed 67-66 for Walther Lutheran.

St. Michael Coach Jim Roberts said he asked officials to check the score at the beginning of the last quarter and was told to "sit down."

"I had the feeling there was something wrong with the score."

Another controversy brews

Officials from Hamilton, La Harpe and the Illinois High School Assoc., were called here for a 1 p.m. hearing today at the courthouse on Hamilton's disputed 75-74 overtime win over La Harpe last Wednesday night in a regional semifinal.

La Harpe Coach Richard Vana described the dispute this way:

"We were leading 74-72 in overtime with 22 seconds to play, we fouled a Hamilton player in the act of shooting. Hamilton called time out. When play resumed, the kid from Hamilton missed his first free throw attempt. The ball should have been dead. But another Hamilton player got the offensive rebound and scored.

"AS SOON AS THE kid went into the lane, the official started the clock. So we had no choice but to take the ball out of bounds and try to score. We took a shot, missed and were called for an offensive foul. The score was tied 74-74.

"The official scorer then called the four officials over and said an error had been made. The official scorer said they had made an error by not allowing the other free throw. But they didn't cancel the field goal. The second free throw proved to be the winning point.

"We protested immediately and tried to get a hold of the ISHA that night. We couldn't reach anyone so we called the next morning. They said 'Yes, but there was nothing they could do about it.' "

"The (game) official, Jack Jones of Keokuk, called me up and said, 'Yes, I did blow the call. I'm really sorry about it.' "

Illinois finally harvesting Chicago's inner-city crop

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — The 70th state basketball tournament is into its elimination process with a distinct awareness of Chicago's mounting influence.

Three Public League quintets stormed through the Class AA event in the past four years, and another pair of tall, mobile Windy City units — Westinghouse and Wendell Philips — are rated as co-favorites this trip.

Yes, it's a "city game" these days, The only way the farm boys have a chance anymore is through a secondary tournament.

UNFORTUNATELY, the University of Illinois reached the mid-70s before tuning into this fact.

History shows that the Illini excelled in the sport up to the time it became a "big city" game. The Illini, records relate, posted a .736 winning percentage (329 wins, 118 losses) in the period from 1937 through 1957 when the Centralias, Champaigns and Mt. Vernons were dominating the prep sport.

It was in 1958 that tall sophomore George Wilson led the first Chicago champion at Marshall High, and he was to come back two years later for a stunning repeat.

It is not entirely coincidental that Illini basketball has dropped to a .546 winning rate (263 wins, 219 losses) since that 1958 season. The Illini couldn't recruit Wilson, and watched as he extended a proud era at Cincinnati. Two years later the Illini failed with Carver's Cazzie Russell and he built a dynasty at Michigan.

THE ILLINI made a major effort in 1959 with a giant Crane product named Tim Robinson but, as was feared both here and in Chicago, he was ill-prepared to cope with UI academic demands.

This was the first of four major disappointments involving prize Chicago cagers on this campus. Two years after Russell slipped away, the Illini landed 1964 Farragut All-Stater Ron Dunlap . . . Harv Schmidt's first class of recruits in 1967 featured 6-8, 244-pound Greg Jackson of Chicago St. Philip . . . and Schmidt attracted All-American Kris Berymon, a 35-point scorer, from Harper in 1970.

These were the only cagers recruited from the heart of Chicago's ghetto during the period ending with Schmidt's departure in 1974, and all left Illinois with the arrow pointing down.

The 6-9 Dunlap was ruled ineligible in December of his junior year by "slush fund" revelations, just when he was becoming a Big Ten standout. Jackson averaged 16 and 17 points per game as a sophomore and junior but encountered serious back and weight problems in a miserable senior campaign that saw an anticipated contender slump to 5-9 in the Big Ten. Berymon flunked out, ultimately had a nervous breakdown and died in a mental institution in the summer of 1975.

THE INABILITY of Dunlap, Jackson and Berymon to attain expected goals strengthened the widespread ghetto feeling that the UI was "full of prejudice and not the place for a good black basketball player."

"I didn't know the individuals or the cases they referred to," acknowledged Levi Cobb this week, "but situations were pointed out to me. People told me black players didn't make it academically here. They said the place was prejudiced. They pointed to Michigan and Indiana, and asked me why I chose Illinois.

"I told them the whole system had changed with new coaches and players. I was confident I could make my grades if I concentrated. I felt close to the coaches (Lou) Henson and (Tony) Yates."

Added the 6-6 freshman from Morgan Park, last year's Class AA champion:

"IT'S BEEN A challenge in the classroom, particularly with so many road games. But I feel I made a good decision. The coaches have asked me to help in recruiting players like Eddie Johnson (Westinghouse), Mike Jones (Joliet Central) and Mark Smith (Peoria Richwoods), and I'm happy to. "I'm confident Illinois can become a winner."

The path, actually, was cleared for Cobb by others. The first key decision was made in 1974 by Chicago Heights' Audie Matthews, reversing a trend of standout suburban blacks like Jim Brewer, Owen Brown and Quinn Buckner to go elsewhere.

That same year, coach Gene Bartow brought in Nate Williams of Crane and Mike Washington of the same Morgan Park school as Cobb. Both were upcoming juniors after playing JC basketball in Iowa, and their senior leadership on Henson's first club helped generate a 14-13 record. Washington, at the same time, was influential in the recruitment of Cobb.

The Illini are now very much "in the market" for Chicago talent . . . Westinghouse's 6-7 Johnson this year, perhaps Phillips' Darius Clemons a year hence. The image has changed since less hopeful days and Henson's team has become increasingly competitive even if the season record is another photo finish with .500 (20 games have had point spreads of five points or less in the last two minutes).

WHEN IT'S ALL over Saturday and insiders analyze the developments, the positive experience of Cobb — learning the ropes, posting between B and C marks in Business Administration, and starting every game with typical freshman high and low points — will be one of the most important aspects.

Ace almost out of reach

The Professor looked at his jack-10 of hearts with a jaundiced eye. If only he could give one of them to dummy he would have an easy two heart tricks. As it was East had won the heart lead with the queen and returned the suit and West had been mean enough to hold back his king. There was that good ace of hearts in dummy and no way to get to it.

There was still a play for the hand. Maybe clubs would break 3-3. Maybe the defense would slip and maybe an end play might develop.

Therefore the Professor led a low spade at trick three. East won with the nine; thought about leading a third heart, but planked down the jack of clubs instead.

Things looked bleak, but there was always some hope. The professor cashed the ace of spades, the three top diamonds and the other two top clubs. Then he drew East in with the fourth club.

That gave the defense three tricks and East cashed his last diamond for a fourth after which he had to lead a heart to dummy's ace.

Ask Andy

Sneezing rids nasal passage of irritations

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Donna Sue Clark, 7, of Charleston, W. Va., for her question:

WHY DO I SNEEZE?

"Bless you," you're often told when you sneeze. The reason for this blessing goes back to ancient times when it was believed that the soul left a person's body when he sneezed. By giving a blessing immediately, the soul was brought back and all was well. There is no truth to this ancient superstition, of course.

To understand the sneezes you must first know some basic details about our breathing passages and the nose. The passages through which air enters are lined with very delicate mucous membranes. When this sensitive skin becomes irritated, we sneeze in order to get rid of the irritation.

You might sneeze because there could be dust in your nasal passage. Or you might sneeze if you look directly at the sun or into any other bright light. If you have the flu, a cold or hay fever, the mucous membrane of your nose becomes swollen and this can also result in an irritation that may force you to sneeze.

Sneezing is strictly a reflex action, which means that you do not have any control over the act because it comes on in an involuntary way — like the blink of your eyes. Quite often you close your eyes when you sneeze. This action, also, is part of the automatic mechanism that controls your sneezing.

We know that nasal passage irritation can set off the sneeze reflex. When the action starts, air is held back in the lungs until pressure is built up. The blocking of air is primarily caused by the uvula, that red, fleshy, finger-like mass that you can see hanging from the soft palate in the back of your mouth. The uvula is suddenly depressed, permitting the air to rush out of the nose and you sneeze.

While the main purpose of a sneeze seems to be to blow any foreign matter out of the nasal passages, it also can happen as a result of respiratory and allergic problems.

Coughing has a function that is similar to sneezing, in that it also is an action used to clear out breathing passages. Coughing, however, clears the lower air channels and the lungs.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Bill Hoover, age 9, of Phoenix, Ariz., for his question:

WHAT MAKES A PERSON'S TEMPERATURE RISE?

A person's body temperature is generally 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. Because the body always produces heat through the burning of food that has been eaten, it is necessary that heat be lost. Your body temperature would rise about four degrees every hour if there were not a way for the heat to escape. Body heat escapes mainly through the skin's surface and also by evaporation from the lungs.

Much heat is produced when a muscle contracts, and that's why exercise makes us feel warm. Heat also is constantly produced by our livers. Blood circulation takes the heat from the hottest places in the body, such as the liver, and carries it to the coolest places, such as our fingers and toes.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

1-story offices form suburb's skyline

by JOE FRANZ

An office building for those who prefer the suburban lifestyle at work as well as at home is under construction in Arlington Heights.

The one-story office structure, which is a relatively new concept in this part of the country, is being built by the Joseph Development Co., Northfield. It sprawls over a seven-acre site at 415 W. Golf Rd.

Donald Joseph, vice president of the firm, said the developers are striving "to create a residential street effect," in the 93,000-square-foot project.

"THE SINGLE-STORY structure is just a concept that we think is good for suburbia," said Joseph, who is developing the Arlington Office Court with his brother, Lawrence.

"We build in the suburbs and feel that people who moved out here want something that is like the rest of the suburbs. The high-rise buildings we don't think relate to the suburbs," he said.

Joseph Development's first single-story project, the Edenwood North Office Court, Northfield, was completed last year. The firm also is building two similar office structures, the Old Orchard Office Court, Skokie, and the Wilmette Office Court, Wilmette.

The Arlington Office Court, which is expected to be ready for its first tenants in May, has several features Joseph said he believes are appealing to suburbanites.

"We spend a lot of time and money on landscaping," he said. "Our whole project is environmentally oriented. The tenant can look out his office window and see trees and grass."

The office court also provides each tenant with an outdoor patio suitable for conferences during the nice weather.

Joseph said the single-story concept offers economies more than those of high-rise office buildings.

"THE COST OF GOING UP is proportionately higher than for a single-story building," he said. "High-rise buildings have a high loss factor on space. They have to have lobbies, elevators, corridors and stairways.

"The space in our developments is totally usable," he said. "Our office buidings have no wasted space."

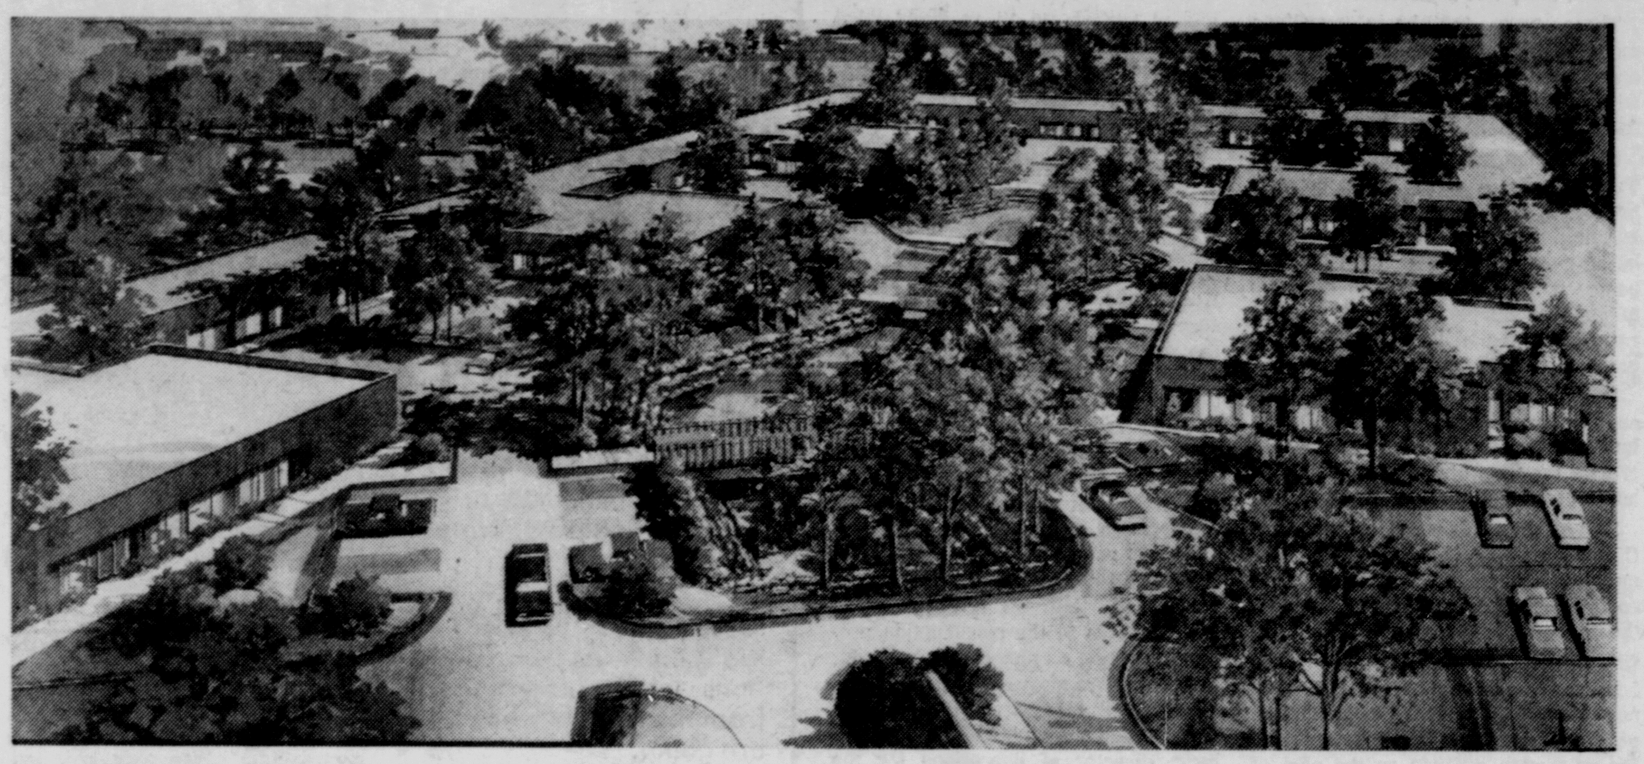
Joseph said it is something of a myth that high-rise buildings take up less space than single-story developments.

"High-rise buildings themselves take up less space, but they use up additional space for parking on the land surrounding the building," he said.

In the Arlington Office Court and Joseph Development's other one-story office buildings, parking is provided in bays that are created by the architectural design of the development.

Joseph said the design of the projects also enables tenants to park outside their office doors.

"THE TENANT DOESN'T have to walk a long way to get to his office," he said. "Since each unit is self-contained, he can enter his office directly from the outside."



THE ARLINGTON OFFICE Court, under construction at 415 W. Golf Rd., Arlington Heights, is designed for those who prefer the suburban lifestyle at work as well as at home. The one-story project is being built by the Joseph Development Co., Northfield.

The Arlington Office Court is geared to a variety of tenants, including accountants, manufacturing representatives, professionals, regional administration offices, consulting firms and sales offices.

Tenants will be able to rent units as small as 600 square feet and as large as 30,000 square feet. Rents will be about $6.30 per square foot per year.

All tenants in the Arlington Office Court will be responsible for paying their own utility costs.

Joseph said the interior of each unit will be partitioned to meet the specific needs of each tenant.

"Each tenant will be able to meet with our architect and a space plan will be worked out so everybody gets exactly what he needs," he said.

Although the developers had difficulty obtaining financing for their first one-story office building, Joseph said the three latest projects have posed no such problem.

"THE FIRST TIME we had some problems because the lenders were reluctant because this was something new," he said. "But after they saw how fast it rented it was easier to get financing on others like it.

"The development in Northfield was finished in 1976 and had a rull-rent roll in 1976, which is unusual," Joseph said.

The Arlington Office Court, he said, already has signed leases for 9,000 square feet, with 30,000 square feet out for signature to potential tenants.

Jopseh said a trend toward one-story office buildings is about to start in this area.

"I think it has to be the office concept of the future," he said. "I know it will catch on because I know of about six other developments similar to ours that are on the drawing boards."

Job transfer? Firm may help you find a new home

If you're one of the 500,000 persons who make a job transfer from one city to another, then you know what a task it is to find the right home in a strange new town.

Now consider having to do this not just once but 800 times a year in cities all over the country. That in substance is the task of the homefinding department of Employee Transfer Corp., a subsidiary of Chicago Title and Trust Co. ETC is retained by corporations to buy the homes of employes being transferred and find new ones in the new location. The homefinding service is available to any transferee, whether or not they're employed by a client corporation.

The staff has been so successful that in the course of helping 800 families in the past year, they've almost never had a case where a family had to take up temporary living quarters and store its furniture because they couldn't find the housing they were looking for. That includes working with families whose children needed special education facilities.

"In 75 per cent of the cases, we can help a transferred family find the new home it wants in a single weekend," according to Theodore D. Bell, executive vice president of ETC.

ONE OF THE MOST important parts of the job is to acquaint the transferee with the new location and the prices of homes there before he ever arrives to do his house-hunting. The homefinding staff provides this information on every major city in the United States and many minor ones as well.

"People are often shocked when they realize what a house costs in another city," he said. "And they may be also shocked by how the new community appears. A person transferred from the Boston area, for example, where there are lots of hills and trees, may be dismayed at the barren look of Cheyenne or Phoenix. They must be conditioned in advance or they'll be discouraged."

The ETC homefinding staff can give a transferred employe complete information on any city in the country. Once the staff knows what the employe is looking for, it can tell him exactly where to look and will line up a selected local Realtor to assist. It's all done on an individual basis, since every transferred family has different needs.

"You have to work with the entire family, not just the employe," Bell said. "The wife of a transferred man may be especially apprehensive, even hysterical. It's especially tough to move a family with high school children. As employes become older, moving presents a new set of problems. So a lot of personal counseling is necessary to make the move easier for them.

"When a transferee acts on his own, he's likely to be steered to an area by a real estate broker who has an interest there or by a fellow employe who already lives there," he said. "Our homefinding isn't that limited. We're interested in referring the transferee to an area where his investment is protected and where his lifestyle will be satisfied."

THE HOMEFINDING process starts when the transferred employee telephones or writes ETC asking for help. A member of the homefinding staff responds with a telephone call and then, in the course of 30 to 45 minutes, delves deeply into the family's needs.

These include some obvious facts about the family: how many members, their ages, what kind of house is presently owned, whether the family wants to rent or buy, what price range is wanted, desired downpayment, special educational and religious requirements, what kind of home the family wants, and what features it considers essential.

But more important are the not so obvious needs which the homefinding staff gets during the telephone interview. It's important, Bell says, that the homefinding counselor be able to relate personally to the transferee, whether he's looking for a $30,000 home or one costing $150,000.

"In talking to transferees, especially the wife, we try to delve deeply into their housing preferences and at the same time start acquainting them with their new location," Bell said. "During this counseling we give the family a lot of useful information on looking for a new house."

THE INFORMATION the staff prepares on the new location is quite detailed. It can include types of homes available in different price categories; downpayments; interest rates and terms of mortgages available; rental figures; taxes; schools; transportation and general community information.

"We have complete data on most parts of the country, which enable us to tell a person not only how much a house will cost but also what the overall cost of living is and whether there's a symphony orchestra in town," he said.

In one case, ETC was called by an executive who wanted information on Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco and Minneapolis. He had a choice of assignments in all four cities and he was trying to decide which one to take. The homefinding staff gave him the data he was seeking, and he decided on Minneapolis.

Once they have an idea of what the employe is looking for, the homefinding staff then contacts a local Realtor in the new city.

"We select the broker by reputation and performance in dealing with transferees. We want to make sure that the Realtor will meet our standards and really work with the family," Bell said.

ONCE THE BROKER has been selected, the homefinding staff makes arrangements for the transferee to come to the new city and for the broker to meet him and show him around. Because the broker is already familiar with what the family is looking for, he can confine the house-hunting tour to the most likely areas and homes.

Because of all this advance preparation and counseling, most transferees can arrive in the new city on a Friday night to begin their house-hunting and buy a new home by Sunday. Without this help, the transferee generally takes a week or two looking on his own, thus losing valuable time and running up expenses. And if he fails to find a home, he may have to move into temporary quarters or delay moving his family.

The average span from the time an employe first calls the homefinding staff until he moves into his new home is two months, Bell says. In emergencies, the time can be cut to three weeks. Finding the home goes fast; it's the paperwork and the actual move that hold things up.

Where things get sticky, the homefinding service can even help the employe get a mortgage.

ONE OF THE MOST difficult problems arises in the case of families whose children need special education facilities. This means narrowing down the choice of homes to those that the family will like in school districts that offer the needed facilities.

"We've done all this, and even arranged appointments for the family to meet and talk with the school administrator. We can check out any city in the country for special needs such as this," Bell said.

ETC's homefinding service is available to any transferred person at no charge. Interested persons can call or write the homefinding department, Employee Transfer Corp., 20 N. Wacker Dr., Chicago, 60606, or telephone (312) 630-2915.

Builders seek stabilization of costs for labor, material

Can the cost of today's housing somehow be kept stable? Most specifically, what can the builder do to hold down costs? Or is it even possible, considering the ever-increasing costs of land, labor and materials?

Those were the basic questions more than 54,000 homebuilders from around the country recently wrestled with at the 33rd annual convention of the National Assn. of Home Builders.

Most of the news the builders heard was upbeat: A bevy of economists predicted a banner year for homebuilding, with the experts pegging housing starts at 1.8 million. Financial people noted that mortgage money is in plentiful supply, and that interest rates areexpected to remain at their present levels for the time being.

But whatever the nature of the various business sessions, the homebuilders never got very far from that crucial question of the cost of today's home.

Surveyed on this point, a number of Chicago-area homebuilders were unanimous in their belief that housing costs could be held down. But only if the entire development process is carefully monitored.

In many instances, the cost of a new home increases even before ground is broken. That's because of the no-growth attitude on the part of some zoning boards. A builder will acquire some land, and then have to sit on it, sometimes for years, before receiving approval to build. And during that time, of course, the costs of everything continue to go up, forcing up the ultimate cost of the home.

But, says Al Bromann, vice president of HeatherRidge Development Co., Gurnee, "That kind of no-growth thinking has definitely changed. Even in the more conservative areas, the zoning boards realize that growth is inevitable. Consequently, they are carefully controlling it from the very beginning, and working with the builders to assure the community of good design and careful environmental planning."

With land costs what they unfortunately are today, builders can still hold down housing costs with some ingenuity. Take New England Village, for example, a new community of 345 single family homes in Schaumburg Township. William A. Maybrook, executive vice president for the developer, Lexington Homes, Inc., notes that "We went to a land plan which gave the new community the density it financially required without sacrificing the conventional single-family look and product we wanted."

The key at New England Village was to cluster six to 15 home units around heavily landscaped cul-de-sacs. This not only proved to be cost-efficient, but it also resulted in appealing mini-neighborhoods within the community.

"Feasibility studies also are a real key to controlling costs," said Cliff Johnson, project manager for the Emerald Green community of condominium homes in west suburban Warrenville. "The builder must make sure he is building the right home in the right location. Forcing the wrong home into the wrong market means that those unsold homes eventually find the builder increasing costs elsewhere just to break even."

Johnson said he's been able to control the cost of his homes because the construction phases are meticulously planned. "We make sure that the work of all of our sub-contractors are dove-tailed," he said. "There are no costly breaks in the construction process. As soon as the concrete is set, the carpenters move in, and so on."

Additional innovative thoughts on construction were noted by Jim Oehlberg, director of operations for the Woodridge Center community in west suburban Woodridge.

"We've worked hard to standardize our construction methods," Oehlberg said. "We avoid going to seven or eight different sizes of window frames, and buy in multiple lots. We're also constantly refining our planning and scheduling methods."

Similar construction thoughts were voiced by Peter Bianchini, vice president of operations for Lexington Development Corp., which has underway two-and three-bedroom condominium coach houses in Schaumburg — the Lexington Green Commnuity.

"There's obviously nothing we can do about the cost of materials," Bianchini notes. "But we can minimize those costs. Lunber, for instance, is going out of sight. Therefore, we're purchasing wood three months in advance to guarantee an equitable price. We're also experimenting with alternate kinds of materials. Such as particle board for soffits. We're saving money that way, and yet not losing any quality whatsoever."

Facts and figures on the high cost of wheels

DONALD F. MORTON PRES.

You know that, next to your home, your automobile is probably the most expensive thing you buy. But do you know how much your car really costs?

Now the Federal Highway Administration has come up with a study, "Cost of Owning and Operating an Automobile, 1976," which indicates that the cost for the ten-year life of a standard car is $17,879, for a 1976 compact $14,561, and for a subcompact $12,638.

These figures are based on the assumption of a single owner over the ten-year period. The study recognizes that this is not usual but notes that half of the autos were still on the road after ten years. Costs rise appreciably for the "one-year trader" and to lesser degrees for those trading at longer intervals.

It will cost you 17.88¢ a mile to drive and maintain a 1976 standard car for ten years, 14.56¢ for the compact, and 12.64¢ for the subcompact.

The purchase price is the first cost in the long line of expenditures that must be paid in operating your car during its approximate 100,000-mile 10-year trip from the assembly line to the junk-yard.

Depreciation of $4,864 on the standard 1976 model automobile is by far the greatest single cost. Other major expenditures on the standard-size car for a 10-year period are: 1) $3,664 for maintenance and repairs; 2) $3,193 for gasoline; 3) $2,209 for garaging, parking, and tools; 4) $1,678 for insurance. Approximately $1,600 go for State and Federal taxes.

These figures make an interesting inflationary comparison with data supplied by the Federal Highway Administration in 1972. They show that costs of operating an automobile have risen almost 32% in the past four years. In 1972, the standard car's lifetime expenditure included $2,787 for gasoline, $2,147 for maintenance and repairs, $1,350 for insurance, and over $1,800 for garaging, parking, and tolls.

Back in 1972, the report noted that, despite the belief of most people, gasoline was not the kind of expenditure many people believed it to be. "In fact," the report stated, "during the past 30 years the price of gasoline has risen less, relatively, than many of the other costs associated with highway transportation. Gasoline is still one of the best bargains on today's market."

Despite the OPEC-influenced rise in prices, gasoline rose from 15.5% to 18.5% of the total cost of operating a car over the past four years, remaining behind depreciation and repairs as noted above.

Those interested in the full report can obtain a copy for 25¢ from the Federal Highway Administration, Transportation Department, Washington, D.C. 20590.

You only collect on loss, not face amount of policy

Bernard Meltzer

On real estate

Most property owners feel that in cases of complete fire loss, they are entitled to the face amount of the fire insurance policy. In truth, they will collect only the amount of their financial loss, even if it be less than the face value of the policy.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We have had a $40,000 fire policy on our house for many years. We had a fire two months ago and our beautiful house was completely demolished. Believe it or not, we cannot collect!

We have been in contact with the insurance adjustor, and he says the house has a maximum value of $30,000. Therefore, that's all they intend to pay us. In view of the fact that we paid premiums on a $40,000 policy all this time, don't you think we are entitled to collect $40,000? — Buried Up.

In most states, an insured can collect only for the actual financial loss, in spite of the amount of the fire policy. If the company's estimate of your financial loss is $30,000, and you think your loss was more, you must prove it to them.

However, in a few states there are valued-policy laws. Under these circumstances, this means that the insured can usually collect the entire amount of the policy.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: We have some lovely old rugs that have been in my husband's family for many years. Lovely though they still are, they are beginning to curl at the corners.

This isn't very attractive, nor is it safe. We're afraid someone may fall and hurt himself. What's more, this curling detracts from the beauty of the rugs.

Is there any suggestion you might have for overcoming this? — Antique Lovers.

Rugs must be sized on the back to prevent the corners and ends from curling up.

To resize your rugs, turn them upside down and tack the ends and corners down. You may then brush with a thin coat of white shellac, or you could spray the back with a solution of one-half pound of blue chips in two quarts of water.

Allow the backs of the rugs to dry thoroughly. This could take as long as two days. When you turn them over, they will lie flat.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My house is 30 years old. I paid $13,000 for it when I bought it. All the houses in my immediate neighborhood are about the same.

My wife and I plan to move to Florida, so we would like to sell the house. It's in excellent condition. All it really needs is a little prettying up, such as new wallpaper and paint.

My wife thinks we'll have a better chance of selling it if we invest in this decorating job. My brother thinks we should try to sell it the way it is. — What Say You?

The money you will spend to have the papering and painting done will not bring much of a price differential. In fact, you will probably lose by it.

Redecorating might make for a quicker sale, but since your house is in good condition, I think you should try to sell it the way it is.

Mortgage review units win praise

John A. Hardin, president of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, commended Milwaukee and Wisconsin savings association leaders for their pioneering role in establishing appeals procedures for rejected mortgage applicants.

"One of the first citywide mortgage review boards was established in Milwaukee," Hardin said.

He addressed the Wisconsin Savings and Loan League's annual convention at the Pfister Hotel in Milwaukee.

HARDIN SAID the Milwaukee Area Mortgage Opportunity Plan has been useful in the development of mortgage review panels in other cities.

"We in tht savings and loan business are proud of your accomplishment. You have shown that mortgage lenders stand ready and able to take an active, responsible part in urban affairs.

"Equally important, the experience of the Milwaukee Area Mortgage Opportunity Plan has punctured many of the widespread myths about inner-city lending."

Hardin said, for example, that only a "trickle" of cases are being brought to the review panels: fewer than one a week in Milwaukee. In Milwaukee and some of the other cities, the bulk of referrals are unrelated to alleged geographic discrimination. And in those few cases where "redlining" is charged, other factors, such as a poor credit history or inadequate income usually surface as the real problems. In some cases, the complaint is found to arise from honest misunderstanding by the borrower or lender. A brief telephone call to the lending institution frequently clears up such cases within hours of a complaint.

DESPITE THE scarcity of substantive cases, however, Hardin said the review panels serve the vital function of a "release valve" for community residents who believe — rightly or wrongly — that they were treated unfairly.

"These panels may get only one or two legitimate cases for review in a year," he said.

"But inactivity doesn't make them a waste of time. Far from it. The fact that a mortgage review panel is there, ready to give anyone a fair hearing, accomplishes two things, even if it never had to decide a case.

"First, it says to the community: The savings and loan business wants to continue making the dream of home ownership a reality — as we have already helped make nearly two-thirds of American families homeowners.

"Second, it's a self-regulating tool for the savings and loan business. It keeps us on our toes, without the heavy hand of red-tape generating government mandates."

The Milwaukee Area Mortgage Opportunity Plan was established in October 1974.

The panel includes seven people from the Milwaukee metropolitan community, drawn chiefly from outside the savings and loan business.

Other cities that have savings associations initiated mortgage review panels under way are New York City, Pittsburgh, Denver, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Portland, Ore., Chicago and Waterloo, Iowa.

LET'S TALK IT OVER

JERRY BOUSCHARD

When putting a house on the market for sale, some owners take the position that they should start with a vastly inflated price, well above what the property will probably bring. "You can always come down," they say, "but it's hard to go up."

Actually, your house should be priced within reason. It must compete for a buyer among well-informed shoppers who know about how much similar property is selling for. Over-pricing discourages both buyers and real estate sales-people. If it remains unsold for too long, potential buyers start to wonder if there's something fundamentally wrong.

We know the market and we can give you a realistic idea of what price your property will bring on today's market. Call us, if you want to know what your home is worth.

New home line

Hoffman development for nontraditional buyer

The challenge for home builders and other businessmen in a volatile economy is not merely to anticipate consumer attitudes and behavior. It is to convert that insight into products and services consumers will support.

This challenge has been compounded in recent years by the rising unpredictability of consumers.

Peter Drucker, an internationally renowned social scientist and economist, said he believes the American consumer market is reforming itself into new groups or "segments" that will behave in new ways.

Writing in the Dec. 1 Wall Street Journal, Drucker said, "We may be witnessing a new segmentation by population dynamics. The older person, the young adult, the mature married female worker, all may emerge as distinct consumer segments that will cause marketing men to rewrite their rules of how consumers ought to behave. Such groups behave 'rationally'. But what is rational for one market segment — that which makes the most of their economic conditions — makes little sense for the other group."

One of Chicago's most successful home building companies recently introduced a new line of homes basically for the reason suggested by Drucker. The company is the Hoffman Homes Division of The Hoffman Group Inc. The product is Westwind at Westlake, and the reason is the belief there is a segment of the home buying public that is not being served by the traditional housing products.

Westwind is a line of single-family attached homes, a hybrid between the detached single-family home and the townhome that evolved from an intense analysis of buyer preferences.

"We found a significant number of shoppers who couldn't fully relate to the available choices," said Tracy Cross, vice president of marketing for The Hoffman Group.

In effect confirming Drucker's observations, what Hoffman Homes found was a home buying segment that was not responding to the traditional choices of detached single-family homes, standard townhomes, small "basic homes," high-rise condominiums or the rental apartment.

Scores of interviews indicated these people were not so much looking for a specific kind of house as for a lifestyle that would be enhanced — or at least not impeded — by the kind of home in which they lived.

Cross said, "These people enjoy entertaining casually and frequently and prefer an open floor plan with a free flow from room to room. They don't want to purchase the biggest house they can possibly afford because that could squeeze their budget. They want to be able to decorate and furnish nicely and begin to really use the house right away.

"Many also have interests that take them away from home and require time and money. One way they can find the time is to buy a home with minimal maintenance responsibilities. And, of course, one advantage of buying a house that is manageably sized for the needs of a single buyer, couple, or small family, is that it leaves you with some discretionary spending power for leisure and recreation activities."

In effect, Cross said, Westwind at Westlake is being extolled not as a house or place to live but as a way to live. That appeal is not directed at people united by a particular age, sex, or income level but by an interest in casual but tasteful living, a manageable amount of space and relative freedom.

Even within that kind of clustering, there is a need to provide distinctions of home sizes and floor plans to assure individuality within the product line.

The Westwind lineup includes one ranch style and three 2-story designs. They range in size from 1,089 to 1,796 square feet. Each has one or more special impact zones like a large master bedroom suite, dramatic open stairwell or specially detailed fireplaces.

Westwind models were doubly challenging. Collectively they are supposed to convey that special easy-going lifestyle they make possible. Yet each individual home is supposed to hold some special attraction for one layer of that special market segment.

"B" model, for example, was designed to appeal most strongly to active, mobile singles with many interests and young working couples who are postponing their family.

Although it is the smallest of the two-story plans with 1,342 square feet of living area, the home has a number of impact areas directed to this kind of buyer. These include a tiled entry foyer that separates a 12 by 14½-foot living room from a formal dining room that measures 12 by 9½ feet and has an optional wet bar; a space-stretching open stairwell; a master bedroom suite with a double door entry, double closets, a separated vanity and private entry to the bathroom; an optional sauna; and a convertible second bedroom. The buyer has the option of converting the second bedroom of 12 by 12½ feet into a den of 12 by 14½ feet that overlooks the stairwell and landing.

Interior designer Jean Zoller of Jean-Lee Inc. opted for an open, almost outdoors feeling with extensive use of natural woods, earth-tones and a multitude of live plants to carry through a mood of active youthfulness.

The fireplace in the living room is trimmed in rough-sawn cedar. There are several natural oak tables and chairs, carpeting is soft gold, and upholstered pieces are of a Navajo print in browns, beiges, tans, and black. The same color tones are used in an attention-getting mirror graphic above the fireplace.

Mrs. Zoller brings the southwest into the other rooms as well. The dining room is very informal with antique chairs. Instead of a wet bar, she has installed a rough-sawn cedar baker's rack swarming with live plants. Daylight filters through a macrame. Another macrame is used as a wall tapestry. Walls in the kitchen and powder room are papered in a pattern of brown, tan, and black owls.

She treats the optional second bedroom as a loft den for hobby-oriented couples. The furnishing is very casual with crate-type tables and a recessed pine workbench/desk combination. The room has its own fireplace with built-in bookcases. Accents include horns, straw accessories, Aztec items, an antique loom and big floor pillows.

Rent control a cancer on system: Realtor

In recent months, rent control has become a volatile issue in a number of communities and states where such measures are under consideration. Viewed as a panacea by renters, rent control is seen by the real estate community as a cancer on the free enterprise system, according to Stanley B. Liberman, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors.

What are the issues? What arguments are advanced by proponents and critics of rent control? What are the roots of the issue?

The roots can be found in World War II when the federal government enacted nationwide rent control. It was only one of a number of emergency measures created to stem the tide of inflation during a period of economic scarcity.

As a federal measure, rent control was terminated after the war, Lieberman said. It was permitted to continue on a local option basis. By the 1960's, only 100 locales in the state of New York, including New York City, still had rent control laws on the books.

Rent control reappeared on the scene in the present decade in response to organized tenant demands. States as distant as Alaska and Maine have passed enabling legislation permitting local communities to enact rent control, he said. A total of 110 communities in New Jersey have put rent control ordinances on the books since a 1973 New Jersey Supreme Court ruling that the regulation of rents is within the powers delegated by the legislature to municpalities. Other states and cities are considering rent control measures currently.

Pointing to the relatively inelastic supply of housing, rent control advocates contend that this factor works against persons with limited resources, Lieberman said. They can't afford to purchase housing because of high home prices and, as vacancy rates drop and rents increase, they can't afford suitable rental housing either.

Rental housing — because shelter is a basic human need — therefore should be regulated, rent control advocates maintain. They point to the utilities as examples of similar regulation.

In response to these arguments, critics of rent control say that such measures tend to block growth in th rental housing market by discouraging private investors.

They say rent controls place the burden of inflation on the apartment owners who are unable to pass increasing costs on to tenants. Between 1973 and 1975, according to the Institute of Real Estates Management, an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors, heating fuel costs increased more than 97 per cent nationwide. Utilities went up more than 47 per cent, repairs increased 26 per cent and total operating expenses advanced 13 per cent. During the same period rents went up only 8.7 per cent.

Critics of rent controls point out that as the rental market becomes unprofitable, some owners convert their apartments to condominiums, Lieberman said. Others let their buildings deteriorate becasuse they are forced to postpone maintenance and repairs. In the end, some abandon their buildings. New rental buildings in rent controlled markets tend to fall into the high rent category because such buildings are not usually covered in rent control ordinances.

Lower property values result when the buildings are allowed to deteriorate, critics say. Communities lose tax revenue and are often faced with tax delinquencies. For example, in 1975 tax delinquencies in New York reached the six per cent level, the highest rate since the Great Depression. The burden for lost taxes shifts to the over-burdened singly-family homeowner.

In its 1977 Statement of Policy, the National Association of Realtors opposes rent control ordinances because they adversely affect owner-rental occupant lease covenants, severely discourage construction and/or rehabilitation of rental units necessary to meet national housing goals and inevitably distort the tax-base by placing a disproportionate share on the single-family homeowner and other non-rental properties."

Instead of increasing needed housing, rent controls have discouraged its creation — rent controls help no one and hurt everyone, Lieberman said.

Moving home goods overseas limited by law

New federal tax laws affecting U.S. civilians living overseas and the continuing trend of on-the-spot training of nationals by American corporations may have a dramatic affect on the movement of household goods abroad, according to Robert W. Fernstrom Jr., president of Chicago-based Fernstrom Moving System, an international moving and storage company.

The new law, which took effect Jan. 1, cuts the foreign income exclusion to $15,000 from a $25,000 maximum and dilutes the foreign tax credit.

"That may cause some second thoughts about relocating overseas, especially among the self-employed and employes of small companies," Fernstrom said. "Big companies generally make up their overseas employes tax losses. However, they may reconsider sending Americans abroad because of the added payroll costs."

Another factor that may affect those who have plans to move overseas, is the growing trend among companies to hire nationals already residing there.

"Nationals returning from studies in the U.S., as well as the increasing availability of higher education in countries overseas, such as Turkey, are a source for professional and skilled jobs formerly held by Americans and Western Europeans," Fernstrom said.

A spokesman for Sears International confirmed that his corporation and others are sending fewer Americans abroad to live. He said Sears is currently training nationals in their own countries to perform store duties. Sears operates 102 stores in 13 foreign countries.

The number of American employees moving to the estimated 20,000 foreign business enterprises controlled by U.S. corporations had been rising at an annual rate of 15 per cent. The figures are expected to drop dramatically.

Included among the more than one million Americans living in foreign countries are students, teachers, military personnel, retirees and some disenchanted citizens.

"While government and military employees won't be affected by the tax change, other persons will. Those on fixed incomes will certainly reconsider the costs involved in living abroad," Fernstrom said. "It will also be harder for companies to deal with the new tax rate in terms of the benefits employees expect."

When You Want to Sell Fast, Think of Us First

REALTOR®

Property must be kept tenantable

Who's responsible for what?

In the sometimes-strained relationships existing between landlord and tenant, about nine-tenths of the disputes revolve around this very basic question.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

My husband and I leased a home in the country. A few weeks ago the water pump broke and we had it repaired. Who has to pay the bill? Us or the landlord?

By the way, can you recommend an understandable brochure about real estate problems — taxes, mortgages, tenancy, etc.? Mrs. E. F. C. (Coopersburg, Pa.)

A. For many casual observers the standard lease form seems to put the lion's share of the burden on the tenant and lets the landlord off with virtually no responsibility for anything. That isn't quite the way it is, but it's certainly how it seems at times.

Ironically, the general rule is that neither party to a lease is really required to make repairs to surrender the premises at the expiration of the lease in as good a condition as it was at the beginning of occupancy — reasonable wear and tear by the elements expected. That would seem to put the entire burden on the tenant for anything, and everything, that goes wrong during his occupancy.

But there's one catch, the landlord is charged with making sure the property is kept tenantable. If he does not, the tenant is free to consider the lease broken and that he has been "constructively evicted."

Obviously, a house cannot remain tenantable very long with an inoperative water pump; so this would make the repair the landlord's responsibility. Fortunately, most landlords are pretty reasonable in this respect and know, full well, that major breakdowns like this are their baby.

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

I don't know of any really good, inexpensive, brochure on the subject of real estate. It's such a broad field that most "brochures" rapidly become "books."

The one I like best is North and Ring's "Real Estate Principles and Practices." It's pretty expensive and you would do well to consult it at the public library. It was written essentially for real estate people, but it's easy reading, nonetheless.

Dear Mr. Campbell: As an investment, my wife and I recently bought a 16-unit apartment building in a university town. We are now worried about how to manage and maintain it. As you can imagine, the turnover in tenants is very high. Mr. W. T. P. (Tempe, Az.)

A. That's the pattern with university apartments. There will be anywhere from 32 to 64 brand new tenants in those 16 units every semester. Your best bet is to trade off free living quarters to a responsible couple (preferably married) in exchange for managerial and maintenance duties. Graduate students (my friends in this business tell me) are usually your best bet.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I own a small "strip" shopping center with eight small stores. For the first time, I have a tenant that I don't know how to cope with.

What started out as a regular bookstore has, in the past couple of years, turned into a hard-core pornographic store, that bothers both me and my other tenants. He claims that the lease doesn't specify what kind of books he would be selling there. Mr. F. V. (San Diego, Ca.)

A. Hogwash! Your tenant's argument won't hold water. It's a cheap cop-out. Give him sufficient notice and, if he isn't out by expiration time, begin eviction proceedings.

There isn't a court in the country that would buy his defense. You'd better work fast because this kind of an operation is hurting the value of your property more than a flash fire would hurt it.

Dear Mr. Campbell: What happens if I put my house up for sale, a buyer accepts the price and then I change my mind? Do I have to go through with the sale? Mrs. G. B. (Allentown, Pa.)

A. Not unless you have already formally (with signature) accepted the proposition.

Many homes damaged by cold: Allstate

Most people would agree that this winter has been a catastrophe, but for many homeowners throughout the country the catastrophe is very real, reports Allstate Insurance Co.

Allstate, the nation's second largest home insurer, says at least 5,200 of the homes it insures have suffered bad winter damage. The severe freezing conditions of the last two weeks of January have prompted the company to set up a catastrophe claims handling organization, similar to those it uses for damage from tornados and other severe storms.

The insurance industry service organization has also termed the situation a catastrophe.

"Structural damage from snow and freeze — damaged pipes make up the bulk of the $2.7 million in claims we expect," said Donald Cameron, Allstate's property claims director.

Homeowners will pay for about $500,000 of that damage through deductibles. Damage has been worst in the southern United States, accounting for about half of the claims. Many of the homes in the South were built with plumbing that was insufficiently insulated to withstand cold as severe as the kind we have had this winter.

Cameron warns that additional damage may occur later this winter, particularly from leaking roofs. To prevent damage through the rest of the winter here are a few tips for protecting a home:

- If water pipes are not well insulated or they run through concrete slabs, they may be susceptible to bursting. To prevent this, keep faucet on at a trickle during extreme cold spells. As long as water is moving in the system it will not freeze.
- If water pipes cannot be left with water running through them, — as in the frequent case of refrigerator ice cube makers, consider insulating the pipes.
- Remove ice and snow that build up at the gutters, particularly after short thawing periods. Otherwise, a refreezing may cause a buildup of ice at the gutter level and force water back up the roof and underneath the roofing material. Eventually, it seeps down through the attic and walls.
- If ice and snow buildup at gutters is a perennial problem, it may be worth installing electric coils near the gutters.
- Most normal snowfall will slide off of a roof, but it would be wise to keep an eye on the amount that remains. If there is a heavy buildup, pull it off with a long pole or rake to provent structural or water damage. But be careful, make sure nothing is in the way when the man-made avalanche descends.

Farming on solar energy may be corn belt's future

"Some corn belt farmers already are relying on the sun to help them dry grain. But it's not for everybody yet, even though research data makes the concept look practical."

That's how Eugene Shove, University of Illinois agricultural engineer, sees solar grain drying in Illinois.

Though in its early stages, research on solar grain drying already offers producers a variety of approaches to harness the sun's energy.

The choice of a "best system" seems to depend on how much the producer expects the sun to do, how much he's willing to invest, and how else he can use the system to spread costs over other parts of the farm operation.

SOLAR GRAIN DRYING isn't new. Research has been in progress since the 1950s. But the concept got a real boost from the 1973 fuel crisis. By late 1974, new projects were under way at two USDA Agricultural Research Service locations and seven state agricultural experiment stations. The Illinois station is one of those sites, and Shove heads the solar grain drying project.

Before the 1973 fuel crisis, most producers used a high-temperature system to dry grain. The system is fast — but 90 to 95 per cent of the energy must come from fossil fuels.

When fuel supplies got tight and prices increased, Shove and other researchers began studying ways to develop a low-temperature drying system. The systems they developed rely on heat in the air to lower grain moisture levels.

THE PROCESS takes longer than a high-temperature system. And sometimes sharp temperature drops make the job of drying grain nearly impossible so fossil fuel systems must be used again.

Relying on the sun as a source of energy is an effort to strike a happy medium — to speed the drying process and avoid high energy costs.

Agricultural engineers such as Shove have found they can collect enough energy to do the job with relatively inexpensive solar collectors. Most collectors consist of a material that traps radiant heat energy between a cover and a dull, black and perhaps roughened, corrugated or v-shaped absorbent surface. A fan forces air over and around the heat-absorbing surface, raising the air temperature before it is blown into the grain bin.

A number of collectors have been used in tests to determine what types of materials and designs are the most efficient, the most maintenance free and least expensive. Plastic collectors inflated by air or supported on a light frame have been tried. Tests have shown the plastic is difficult to maintain and inflated collectors collapse under snow. On the other hand, the cost of installation and the time required to install plastic collectors are relatively low.

ANOTHER TYPE OF collector is a collar wrapped around a round metal storage bin. The bin first is painted black on the side facing the sun. Then clear fiberglass roofing is nailed to wood bolted around the bin, leaving a three-inch gap where the warm air can accumulate. The bin's ventilation fan draws the warm air collected between the clear fiberglass and the black bin and blows it through the moist corn.

Other collectors use roofs and sidewalks of adjacent metal buildings such as machinery sheds.

Grain drying tests have shown collector efficiency to range from 12 to 62 per cent. The most efficient collectors that could be used for drying were small diameter cylinders or tubes. Those collectors shown to be least efficient were unpainted, bare-metal collectors mounted on the sidewalks of bins.

SOLAR ENERGY can be used directly when it is available. But what about when the sun isn't shining? Some researchers feel performance of solar systems could be improved for use during the night and during extended periods of cloudy and rainy weather by building heat storage units.

In solar storage systems air treated with solar energy is used to heat pebbles, rocks and other materials. Then during periods when direct solar energy is not available air is moved through storage material and recovers the stored heat. In the process the air's humidity is lowered before it is passed through the grain as drying air.

Researchers also are using saucer-shaped reflectors and curved surfaces to gather the sun's rays. Such collectors are called concentrators because they focus the energy and achieve higher temperatures. The heat is then channeled through water-filled pipes to solar ponds, gravel pits, and in some cases wet soil heat storage units.

SOLAR PONDS resemble indoor swimming pools painted on the sides and bottom. A strong salt solution is used in the pools because fluctuations in water temperatures are limited in salt water.

But since low-temperature grain drying does not need a great amount of heat storing solar energy is not practical at this time. Shove, however, said if farmers start making multiple use of solar energy, storage will become important.

Solar collectors for space and water heating as well as grain and forage drying are being studied. Such multiple uses would reduce equipment costs charged to solar grain drying and further reduce dependence on fossil fuels.

Housing so scarce people stand in line

HONG KONG (UPI) — The newly rich of land-scarce Hong Kong are literally waiting in lines these days for a chance to become homeowners.

Thousands were so eager to buy homes last month that they spent two nights waiting outside a real estate office to make a deposit on a massive housing complex which has yet to be built on what was once 17.5 acres of dairy pasture.

Private developers, including some of Hong Kong's industrial giants, and the government are moving in to meet the demand. And many promise the introduction of a completely new mode of residential living.

Brokers and profiteers, too, are seizing the golden hour.

"People began showing up 30 hours before we put up two blocks of Chi Fu Fa Yuen for sale," a spokesman for the developers said.

The mammoth $120 million residential complex, slated to accommodate 20,000 persons in 4,350 apartments when completed in five years, is aimed at those in the middle income bracket.

So many people gathered on the first day, the spokesman said, that registration cards were given out so the people could go home and return on the day of sales. When another batch of people arrived, some received offers of up to $600 for the cards.

"The cards merely showed that you has a position in line. They were not receipts for deposits, although some people were led to think they were," a company official said.

The apartments were selling at prices from $22,000 to $40,000.

Measures to cut down profiteering were introduced at some of the so-called "deluxe" estates springing up throughout Hong Kong.

At Mei Fu Sun Chuen, the first such giant estate here which is 90 per cent owned by the American Mobil Oil Co. and already houses more than 60,000 persons, no ownership changes are accepted for three months after the first installment for its newest units.

The most common reason given for the desire to own homes is that one pays as much on rent as on monthly installments. "So why pay a landlord when I can become a landlord myself, in time?" said interior designer Wong Huwung.

Most installment plans run for from 10-20 years. Home buyers in this British colony do not seem disturbed by the existence of the lease which allows Britain to rule much of Hong Kong for exactly 20 years more. "China can take Hong Kong any time it wants to; so why worry about a piece of old paper?" said one homeowner.

Considerable social status also comes with homeownership, which until the last decade was considered the exclusive privilege of the rich. Now young wage earners, small business proprietors, retired pensioners and anyone with a savings account of $3,000 can buy homes.

As a result, a new generation of housing estates have sprung up. All the largest privately owned estates being built are billed as self-contained communities with banks, shops, restaurants, supermarkets, schools and recreational facilities. In addition, many boast of tight security systems — with squads of guards, close-circuit television and alarm buttons in every apartment to ward off crime.

The question of market demand and the risk of oversupply are in the minds of at least some of the developers.

"We are gauging market demands to determine the speed with which construction of the various stages of Tai Koo Shing should be completed," said David Wong of the Swire Group, a leading local corporation.

Tai Koo Shing, an enormous "city of tomorrow" built on the site of a ship repair dockyard, is conceived to house 53,000 persons in 10,000 apartments. The current price for a 780-square-foot apartment stands at $38,000.

Landscaping to fit lots of designs

George Creed

It's your landscape

Take any lot with any kind of house on it in any part of the country and you can devise an infinite number of landscape plans for it — and they'll all be different.

Residential landscapes, in a way, are like human thumb prints: there are no two alike though in many subdivisions they may appear to be so.

Your landscape should reflect your needs and interests. Before attempting to design your landscape you should decide what you want in it. If you know these things at the outset, you set goals to work toward and this makes planning easier.

Make a ist of all the things you would like to have in your landscape. Do you want gardens? How about areas for sports? Are you interested in minimum maintenance? What about an area where your children may play in safety? These are some of the questions you should ask yourself while preparing your list.

YOUR INITIAL attempts at planning need not be elaborate. A few thumbnail sketch plans like those in the accompanying plan are sufficient to begin with.

In plans of this nature you simply put down on paper your ideas without too much conern for precision and sizes. In each you indicate what you want and without much trouble you can arrange and rearrange the areas to suit your fancy.

After you have made a series of these miniature studies then you can begin to plan on a larger scale, going more into detail and relating the sizes and shapes of areas to the actual space you have available in your yard.

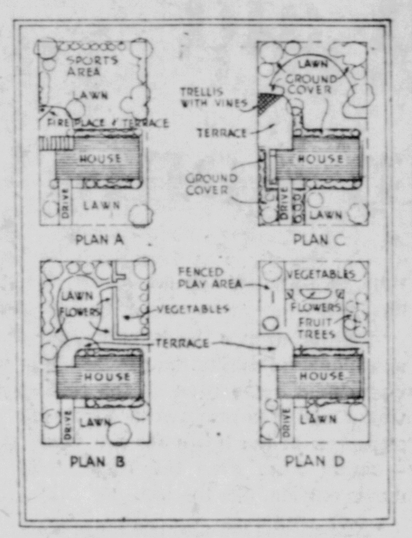
In following articles each of the plans shown here will be developed more fully and at larger scale to illustrate the process of working from a general scheme to a detailed one.

Q. In laying perforated pipe for draining my yard should the perforations face up or down?

A. They should face down.

Q. Is there any way to determine how much fertilizer to use to properly fertilize a tree?

A. One rule of thumb is to measure the diameter of the tree at the height of your waist and allow three pounds of fertilizer for each inch of tree diameter.



Booklets available at cost: To receive any one of the following, write me in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006 enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and requested amount of money. The prices are: Ornamental Shrubs, 20 cents in coin; Deciduous Trees for the Small Home, 20 cents in coin; Making a Lawn, 20 cents in coin; Coniferous Evergreens, 10 cents in coin; Pruning Trees, Shrubs and Evergreens, 10 cents in coin.

To receive all five, enclose a long, self-addressed envelope with 24 cents in stamps and 80 cents in coin.

Service stations become neighborhood sights

"Keep an eye on that neighborhood gas station — before long you may not recognize it."

Speaking is Richard J. Boushka, president and chief executive officer of Vickers Energy Corp., a sub-holding company of Esmark, Inc., Chicago. Esmark is a diversified holding company with additional major interests in foods, chemicals and personal products.

"Community spirit is making a big comeback in the seventies," says Boushka, "and gas stations are joining right in. Stations are developing as neighborhood centers — with exteriors designed to fit in with the surrounding architecture."

As an example, he cites an Eastern city where the local fine arts commission stepped in — halting plans to tear down a gas station. Reason? It would "disrupt the distinctive character" of the area.

Another station fits in so well that the upstairs of this two-story building is occupied by a local church.

"Gas stations have always reflected the tastes and moods of the times, observes Boushka, "but never more than today."

Some highlights of the history of gas station architecture are provided by Boushka:

• First period of distinctive design: the 1930s. Watchwords of that era were "chin up" and "tighten your belt." Gas stations reflected these concepts with the Spartan look — small, boxy, and plain.

• The postwar mid-forties saw a real boom. Stations expanded rapidly — adding service bays, new hydraulic lifts and more pump islands. Exteriors became more adventurous, as steel and glass came more and more into play.

• In the fifties, America really hit the road. Superhighways sprouted — and cars swarmed over them. Curves and fins on the autos were echoed in the super-streamlined shapes of "gasoline plazas."

• Specialization and innovation were the hallmarks of the 1960's, as well as self-service islands. Design features embraced modern and Western looks — there was also a run on traditional — Colonial or Williamsburg styling in brick.

The corner gas station will continue to be a sign of the times, says Boushka: "As community tastes and needs change, gas station will follow close behind."

Indoor, outdoor lighting accents features of home

"Proper and adequate lighting is a viable silent partner for home builders."

Throwing some light on this subject is Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston.

"Lighting aids dramatically in helping to achieve a cheerful atmosphere which also abets security requirements," he said.

Goss says that extensive lighting is absolutely necessary to make a room warm, inviting and completely useful.

"Home builders pay attention to lighting and fixtures. They set up a fixed dollar lighting allowance and have buyers select fixtures based on this allowance or permit them to take credits to use at their own suppliers," Goss said.

True, lighting can be expensive, and economics govern its usage, but it is invaluable in maintaining strong home sales, he said. Custom-made fixtures have that eye appeal that helps "turn on" potential buyers, he said.

Goss believes that one should not confine lighting to the interior of a home, either.

"Steps, paths, walkways, parking and recreational areas all require aesthetically pleasing lighting which also doubles as a security system," he said.

He suggets the following:

• Use lighting in valances along curtain walls.

• Highlight paintings, objects of art and greenery with low voltage fixtures.

• Throw soft, incandescent lights on exterior walls with tree-mounted units.

• Shed a glow on the dining room table with a rheostat on the chandelier.

• Beam cornice lights to play over the fireplace.

• Have fun with a long-throw, recessed fixture to highlight a two-story entry.

• Use fluorescent, recessed or ceiling-mounted lighting to spotlight kitchen cabinets or china shelves.

• Spike a light unit next to a driveor pathway.

"In other words, put a little light in your life," Goss said.

Landscaping good aid to saving energy in home

Americans, in their efforts to save energy, tend to concentrate on the insides of their homes — added insulation, less use of appliances, and so on.

But Mobil Oil Corp. and its consumer affairs directir, Judi Hampton, say there are things to be done on the outside as well.

Landscaping, for example, "is extremely important," according to Ms. Hampton.

"Building or planting a windbreak can prevent the wind from hitting your home full-force," she says. "And this is especially important for people who have not gotten around to sealing all the leaks in their homes, because wind coming through those leaks can increase heating bills by as much as 20 per cent."

HAMPTON ALSO notes that proper lanscaping — including the planting of trees — "can help keep down your air conditioning cost in the summer."

In designing your house for maximum protection, she suggests that "south and west window exposures be used for living areas.

"These areas normally get more sun and less wind, which can save energy and money in the winter," she says. "In the summer, the sun can be kept out by installing awnings."

But, Ms. Hampton adds, "You don't want to keep the sun out in the winter.

"Pulling drapes back and shades and blinds up during the day can help warm up a room even on the coldest winter day. Too many of us barricade ourselves in the house for the winter — away from even the helpful elements outside, like the sun.

"That means we also use more electricity by keeping the lights on during the day."

Ms. Hampton notes that a 100-watt bulb left on for an average of six hours a day will, at the end of a year, consume the energy equivalent of a half-barrel of oil.

Some tips on planting windbreaks

Need more insulation for your house? How would you like some insulation that's up to 50 feet thick? You can get it by planting a windbreak.

Windbreaks are permanent so you need to consider their layout carefully. You should give consideration to species, location, site preparation, and maintenance.

The planting should be made to cover the direction which the more severe winter storms come form. In Illinois, this means planting on the north and west sides of buildings. Leave about 75 to 150 feet between the windbreak and the area to be protected. The farther away you plant it, the longer it will be before you get any protection.

THERE ARE MANY evergreens and shrubs available for windbreaks. some evergreens suitable for plantings are: white pine, red pine Austrian pine, differed spruces or red cedar. It's important to choose a specie that is suited to the soil. Refer to a soils map for this information.

Shrubs add beauty to your windbreaks, furnish wildlife food and shelter, as well as provide protection from the surface winds. These shrubs may be planted on either side of your windbreak. Some suitable shrubs are: autumn olive, silky and gray dogwood, amur honeysuckle, or lilac. Many kinds will work but be sure they are adapted to the site.

The kind of protection desired will determine the number of rows in the windbreak planting. A farmstead windbreak should consist of at least three rows of plants. Some combinations may be two rows of evergreen and one row of shrubs, two rows of evergreen and two rows of shrubs with a row on the windward and leeward sides, or three rows of evergreens in adjacent rows.

To help the plantings survive, competing vegetation should be controlled the year of planting. This control should be continued for several years. Be sure to keep livestock and poultry out of the windbreak and divert any barnlot drainage from the area.

For assistance in getting you insulation started, contact the Soil Conservation Service.

'Stage set for real estate growth'

A strong recovery in 1976 from the real estate crunch of 1973-75 has set the stage for further expansion in 1977. Industrial property, office space, neighborhood shopping centers and new home construction will spearhead the upswing.

That optimistic prediction by Michael F. Pritchett, mortgage officer in the real estate finance division of Baird & Warner, Inc., is based on his expectations that 1977 will produce these conditions:

- Steady growth in the economy with a consequent absorption of available real estate.
- An abundance of mortgage money.
- Manageable rates of inflation and predictable building costs.
- A return of confidence and willingness by both lenders and developers to take risks.

This contrasts sharply with the recent depression in real estate, Pritchett said.

Pritchett said much of the excess of space in commercial and industrial real estate at the end of 1975 has been absorbed.

PRITCHETT SAID there is now an abundance of long- and short-term money at more attractive rates available to the real estate industry.

He noted that long-term rates for mortgage loans secured by income-producing properties that were at 10 per cent or more at the end of 1975 have now dropped by a full percentage point. Single-family home mortgages are now trending toward 8.25 per cent plus service fee.

The final ingredient in his forecast for continued recovery is the abatement of inflation from above 10 per cent in 1974 to a current rate of about 5 per cent, which Pritchett said the economy and real estate industry find generally tolerable.

As a consequence of an improving business climate, developers and lenders seem more willing to assume risks, Pritchett said.

Pritchett's specific expectations for 1977 are:

- Industrial buildings: Vacancy is down and no space is available for certain sizes of building in many markets. During 1976 many build-to-suit industrial buildings and a few "speculative" industrial buildings were developed. Among the areas with nominal vacancy are Hillside, Bellwood, Broadview, eastern DuPage County, Morton Grove and Niles. By the spring of 1977, construction will have started in the O'Hare industrial area, where vacancy is steadily dropping, in several buildings of size in excess of 100,000 square feet.
- Office buildings: The recovery in the office building market has already commenced with large blocks of suburban and downtown office space already leased or under negotiation. Construction started in 1976 on major office buildings without preleasing in the O'Hare, Schaumburg, Oak Brook and Edens corridor areas.
- Shopping centers: 1974-1976 was a turbulent period for the shopping center industry. The greatest shopping center activity was in suburban neighborhood centers anchored by a food store. The development of neighborhood centers will continue during 1977 and will benefit from the suburban single-family home boom now underway. There probably will not be a large number of community centers (anchored by a food store and a discount or department store) developed in the Chicago area in 1977.
- Single-family homes: Construction of new single-family homes paced the recovery in 1976 and the pace of construction will continue in 1977. The Bell Federal Survey of Buildings showed 23,381 home starts in the first 11 months of 1976 versus 13,913 home starts in the first 11 months of 1975, an increase of 68 per cent. Communities such as Schaumburg, Naperville, Vernon Hills and Roselle are leading in construction of single-family homes.
- Multi-family housing: The development of multi-family housing, which includes rental apartments and condominiums, was in a depressed state during 1976. Apartment development was especially hard hit by the combination of high construction costs, high borrowing costs, rapidly inflating operating costs such as real estate taxes and utilities, and, in some parts of the country, overbuilding. Though these conditions have improved, it will take a combination of still higher rents and still lower long-term interest rates before there will be a recovery in the construction of conventionally-financed apartments.

'Managers must fight inflation'

Joseph T. Aveni, 1977 president of the Institute of Real Estate Management, believes it's time professional property managers recognize their responsibilities to the housing industry as a whole.

Aveni, who heads the national association of Certified Property Managers, stressed that all professional property managers have a responsibility to aid in the national drive to conserve energy and curb inflation.

An IREM research publication, shows that heating fuel costs have skyrocketed for the third consecutive year. For the period 1973 through 1975, heating fuel costs rose 97.7 per cent and utility bills increased 47.7 per cent. According to Aveni, "All indicators emphasize that this trend will continue. We must learn how to cope with it."

"To this end," Aveni said, "IREM and the Federal Energy Administration, in 1977, will cooperate in a joint study to measure the effects of specific energy conserving procedures nationally. Hopefully, the result will be a publication which details effective energy conserving guidelines for apartment buildings."

Aveni also said that "because of their unique perspective, professional property managers share a responsibility to alert the housing industry, as well as the public, to impending dangers such as the current spread of rent control in this country." He cited IREM's official position — that rent control is destructive to the free market system, and will deprive many deserving American families of an ageless American dream, their own home.

"Another area of concern which has reached the critical stage in this country," said Aveni, "is the abundance of distressed properties. More than 300,000 units of Section 236 multifamily assisted housing are in serious financial trouble. Additionally, some 200,000 federally-assisted apartment projects have been foreclosed before construction was ever completed."

Aveni's remarks are contained in "Our Responsibility to the Housing Industry," featured in the January/February 1977 issue of the Journal of Property Management.

Industry gunning for cable pirates

Cable television operators, who for years were accused of pirating other people's programs, now find the shoe on the other foot. They complain home viewers are stealing programs from them.

The cable TV companies settled nearly all their disputes with the broadcasters some years ago.

Piracy of programs from their cable networks by people who didn't want to pay the monthly fee was a piddling matter until Home Box Office, Inc., of New York and similar firms began marketing new feature films and other special attractions, piping them into homes through local cable networks.

That raised the ante significantly. The chiseler who could save only $5 to $8 a month by an illegal hookup now was able to steal perhaps $15 worth of programs in a month that way.

This caused a tremendous increase in the thieving by means of illegal hookups and a number of cable television companies felt they were losing a lot of money, said John Barrington, a vice president of Home Box Office.

"Not all of the cheats are homeowners," Barrington said. "We and other cable operators also have been victimized by electricians who represented themselves as working for HBO or the local cable TV company. These characters made illegal hookups and proceeded to collect and pocket the monthly fees."

Teleprompter Corp., the country's largest cable television operator, has been particularly active in cracking down on the program pirates.

"We have adopted a very tough policy and it is paying off," said President William J. Bresnan of Teleprompter's cable TV division. Teleprompter has obtained arrests of persons for illegally hooking their receivers into its cable networks in Alabama, California, Florida, New York and Ohio. It also has persuaded a number of city governments to enact new ordinances providing stiff penalties for illegal hookups.

Florida has enacted a state law permitting judges to inflict sentences of up to a year in jail and fines of up to $1,000 for program piracy. The local governments often lose heavily by the piracy since their fees from the cable operators are on a percentage of receipts basis.

Barrington said the field for piracy of cable television programs is substantial because the number of premium programs now being offered is large and they are attracting a good market.

Any good electrician can make an illegal hookup, he conceded, although it is somewhat difficult with the newer type equipment used by companies like Teleprompter and HBO, which employ unscrambling circuits to filter out of the viewing audience the vast number of non-subscribers.

Barrington also said that, like the "blue box" with which so many persons have ripped off the telephone companies on long distance calls, pirating cable television programs, particularly new feature films, appears often to be done by students and other young persons just for a thrill, as a challenge to their personal daring or technical skills.

Veterans 'good risk' in mortgage market

"Veterans are good risks when borrowing money to purchase a home," says Donald R. Ramsey, director of the Chicago regional office of the Veterans Administration.

He based his opinion on VA records of veterans who have received VA-guaranteed home loans through his office.

The typical veteran-borrower had service during the Vietnam era, was born in the middle or late forties and has an income of about $1,000 a month.

The average veteran buying a home is married, has two children, buys a once-used single family home for about $29,000 and has worked for the same employer for more than two years.

January building permits down 35.3% from 1976

The number of building permits issued in the Chicago area in January was 35.3 per cent lower than for the same month in 1976, according to a survey by Bell Federal Savings and Loan Assn., Chicago.

The survey shows that the number of permits issued by municipalities and counties for single-family and multiple-family construction dropped from 1,054 in January 1976 to 682 for the same month this year.

The most significant difference occurred in the construction of multiple-family housing where the number of permits issued decreased 83 per cent, from 472 in January 1976 to 81 for the same month this year.

Single-family building permits posted an increase of 3 per cent, going from 582 in January 1976 to 601 during the same month this year.

The number of permits issued for single-family homes in the suburban areas was 428 in January 1976, almost unchanged from the 431 issued the previous January. The suburbs issued permits for 41 multiple-family units in January this year compared to 448 in the same month in 1976.

Chicago issued 27 permits for single-family homes this January compared to 16 in 1976. Multiple-family housing permits in Chicago numbered 22 this January, up from none the previous year.

The unincorporated areas issued 146 single-family permits in January compared to 135 in the same month the previous year. The number of permits issued in the unincorporated areas for multiple-family housing was 18 in January, a decrease from the 24 the year before.

Naperville, which issued 36 building permits in January, was the leading municipality in the Chicago area.

Other municipalities that ranked in the top 10 for the issuance of building permits in January were: Orland Park, with 35; Hobart, Ind., with 25; Schaumburg, with 21; Roselle, with 20; Libertyville, with 19; Carol Stream, with 18; Wheeling, with 16; Northbrook and Bolingbrook, both with 12.

High quality, versatility answer to obsolescence

NEW YORK (UPI) — Coping with rapid and disruptive obsolescence, a tough problem in many businesses, is acute in computer terminals but Edward D. Orenstein of Minneapolis feels he has found the answer.

Orenstein heads a company called Data 100 Corp. He has been in the data display business since 1958 and left Control Data, the big main-frame computer maker in Minneapolis, in 1969 to join the group forming Data 100.

"The answer to the obsolescence problem is to insist always on high quality and extreme versatility in your equipment," Orenstein said.

"Remote batch terminal equipment and multifunction processing are by their nature bound to be more a leasing than a sale business," he added. "So you've got to make and use equipment that will pay for itself in a reasonable time, then earn an increased profit for some years longer if you really want to make out. To do that you must insist on both high quality and extreme versatility."

A company that leases low-priced cars and trucks can solve the obsolescence problem by trading its vehicles every two or three years. A company that leases very expensive trucks can't afford to trade them in. It must be prepared to maintain the chassis at high levels and change the trucks' bodies to serve the needs of different customers over a considerable number of years if it is to make out.

Orenstein said following a similar policy in designing and manufacturing equipment has enabled Data 100 to compete with the giants in the computer terminal and multifunction distributed processing business and build up revenues of more than $100 million a year. The company presently is second to IBM in its chosen field.

"This business has an estimated volume of about $1 billion a year now and most of us think that volume will more than double by 1980," Orenstein said.

There are a lot of companies in computer terminals but only about a dozen in the part that Data 100 operates in. The company doesn't make retail terminals, for example. Its customers are diversified manufacturers, big oil companies such as Standard Oil of California, agribusiness and chemical companies and engineering and construction firms.

Multifunction distributed processing means decentralizing the over-all data processing operations to a number of locations, using minicomputers in stead of total reliance on a central computer. But the system is connected to the central computer for even greater versatility.

Most important of all, Orenstein said, when new equipment and new systems are introduced they must be fully compatible with existing systems or else the obsolescence demon will step in and ruin things.

Orenstein was in New York to introduce a new line of remote display equipment that he said would enable customers to develop their existing computer terminals into multifunction systems with a lot of unique capabilities.

THE LEADING REAL ESTATE FIRM — SERVING NORTH SHORE AND NORTHWEST SUBURBAN CHICAGOLAND*
Sign of Q&T Service SINCE 1884
Quinlan and Tyson, Inc. REALTORS®
93rd Annual Report

FRANK B. FOSTER CHAIRMAN AND PRESIDENT

President Credits Q & T Growth To Service Tradition

From its founding in 1884, Quinlan and Tyson, Inc., Realtors, has grown to become the largest real estate firm in the Chicago North Shore, Northwest Suburban and Lake County, Illinois marketing areas, said Frank B. Foster, Chairman and President of the 93-year old Company. Satisfied repeat customers contributed heavily to the growth in 1976.

In our country's Bicentennial Year, Quinlan and Tyson enjoyed a record-breaking 12 months marked by these highlights:

—The Residential Sales Division had total sales of $181.5 million, $31.5 million more than 1975's record year, and a 23% increase. Transaction volume rose 14% to 2472.

—Q&T Management reported a new high of $10 million in rent and assessment volume, up 10%.

—Q&T Insurance recorded a premium volume of $1.2 million, an increase of 20%.

—Q&T Mortgage Corporation reported a financing volume of $3.7 million, and $1.5 million in shopping center revenues.

—Q&T Investments sold $1.2 million of commercial property and prepared to enter the group investment sales field.

The $181.5 million in residential sales maintained Q&T's No. 1 leadership position in the areas served.

The sales total represents an average of more than $1 million in sales per salesperson, an accomplishment that is unprecedented among multiple office firms in the United States. It is a tribute to the professionalism and integrity of our sales staff and the leadership provided by Richard G. Rutledge, Executive Vice President and William B. Martin, Senior Vice President.

The "Quest®" Transferee Service, headed by Assistant Vice President Valentine Ericsson, made a significant contribution to the record year, accounting for $12 million of the total. The nationally recognized service found homes for transferred executives at a rate twice the national average.

Q&T Management constituted the second largest activity of Quinlan and Tyson. This division is responsible for property management of apartments, condominiums, co-ops, and commercial and office buildings. It also supervises apartment, office and commercial rentals. The division is headed by William G. Jennings, Executive Vice President, and Lorenz (Bud) Garcia, Vice President.

Q&T Insurance division is headed by Vice President Wayne Meling. The division provides insurance coverage of all types, including homeowners, apartment owners, hospitalization, fire, automobile, jewelry and furs, personal accident, bonds, commercial, industrial, liability, boats, snowmobiles, workmen's compensation, boiler, plate glass, builder's risk, plus apartment, office and store package policies.

Q&T Mortgage Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary of the parent company, is headed by President Leland Larson and Chairman William G. Jennings. The corporation is active throughout the Midwest in shopping center development and placement of long-term mortgages with major insurance companies and other financial institutions. It currently is involved in the development of five shopping centers in Libertyville, Naperville, Palatine, Palos Heights and Kenosha, Wis., and operation of a sixth center in Glenview.

The corporation also makes construction loans and provides related services such as inspections of properties under construction and payouts to contractors.

Administrative and supportive services for these wide-ranging real estate activities are under the supervision of Richard Bock, Assistant Treasurer. The services include Q&T Accounting and Q&T Office Services, LaVerne Davis, Manager.

Q&T Data Processing, headed by Manager John Mathews, entered 1977 with a new outside client service program underway.

Q&T has grown tremendously since it was founded in 1884 as Barry, Rose, and Quinlan, the names of the founding partners. An Evanston office was opened in 1895.

The Company began developing suburban branches with a small office in Winnetka. The present Winnetka Area Office at 586 Lincoln Avenue was opened in 1937 and now is the firm's largest branch office.

The Glenview branch was launched in 1954, followed by the Deerfield Area Office in 1960. Five years later, the Lake Forest Area Office was opened and quickly expanded.

In 1969, Q&T marked a major expansion into the Northwest Suburban area, with three area offices — Arlington Heights-Mt. Prospect, Palatine, and Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates. A fourth area office, Buffalo Grove, was opened in January of 1975.

Rounding out the firm's growth in the North Shore-Lake County area were the Libertyville-Mundelein Area Office in 1969, the Highland Park Area Office in 1972, and our new Northbrook Area Office in October of 1976.

Today, Quinlan and Tyson residential division is a 12-office company serving 50 communities in a 750-square-mile area, the largest firm in the area served.

In 1977, the company intends to continue its growth in sales and service for our valued customers. Q&T Management has announced a new Profit Management Service, a versatile service that can be uniquely tailored to meet any needs of apartment, condominium, co-op, office and commercial property owners.

Profit Management Service will include rental service, computer accounting service, building operating service and financial service, separately or combined.

Q&T Advisors, a subsidiary, planned a new syndication program in 1976. (Securities regulations limit details which can be given at this time.)

The Q&T Institute concluded another successful training year.

As Quinlan and Tyson expands to meet the challenges of its 94th year of consecutive service, we will continue to measure our success in terms of service, not just sales volume.

We will continue to follow the honest and forthright policies which have served us — and our customers — so well in the past. The good will of our service organization, a legacy from past years, is a priceless business asset.

We confidently expect to enjoy a successful 1977 by adhering to the highest ethical practices and providing the best possible professional real estate services to our customers.

Sincerely

FRANK B. FOSTER

It's almost that time again

Standard tax deduction increased by United Press International

Taxpayers wrestling with their 1976 federal individual income tax returns this year will find the sweeping and not-so-subtle Tax Reform Act of last year has touched on more than a few areas of return filing concern.

First off, the standard deduction has been increased again. The maximum percentage standard deduction is $2,400 for single persons, $2,800 for married persons filing joint returns and for surviving spouses, and $1,400 for married persons filing separate returns, according to the Commerce Clearing House, Chicago, an authority on tax law.

The low-income allowance standard deduction is $1,700 for single persons, $2,100 for married persons filing joint returns and for surviving spouses, and $1,050 for married persons filing separate returns. The income levels at which most taxpayers are required to file also have been raised.

THE LONG FAMILIAR Optional Tax Tables have been replaced by tables that are based on taxable income. These new tables must be used by all taxpayers whose taxable incomes are $20,000 or less. Taxpayers who compute their tax liability will have to compute their taxable incomes in all cases (1) by claiming the standard deduction (percentage deduction or low income allowance) or itemizing their personal deductions and (2) by deducting their exemptions.

A general tax credit is available to all taxpayers. The credit is the greater of (1) two per cent of the first $9,000 of taxable income or (2) $35 times the number of personal and dependency exemptions that a taxpayer may claim (other than those for age and blindness).

A new credit, known as the "tax credit for the elderly," replaces the retirement income credit. The credit is computed under two sets of rules — one applicable to persons age 65 or older and the other to government retirees.

Child and dependent care expenses that are incurred so that a taxpayer and his spouse can work qualify for a tax credit instead of an itemized deduction. The credit is in an amount equal to 20 per cent of employment-related expenses, which may not exceed $2,000 if one qualifying child or dependent is involved or $4,000 if more than one qualifying individual is involved. The old sick pay exclusion has been replaced by a rather limited disability pay exclusion.

THE MINIMUM tax rate has been increased from 10 per cent to 15 per cent and several new tax preference items have been added.

Deductions for home office expenses are governed by strict, new rules, and new limitations apply for deductions on vacation home rentals. Also, limitations apply to expenses of attending foreign conventions beginning after 1976.

Income tax return preparers are required to place their identifying numbers on all returns they prepare.

Al Forslev hasn't time to be bored

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Albert Forslev's retirement is "for the birds!"

At age 76, Al keeps happier than a whole flock of larks . . . creating colorful birdhouses complete with much loving and intricate detail.

This grandfather of 11 also fashions dollhouses to rival any in Santa's workshop. At least, granddaughters Lorie Forsley and Karin Nagel think so.

Trail along with this contented, gentle Mount Prospect retiree into his neat-as-a-pin basement workshop. Smells of newly sawed wood and fresh paint tickle your nose as you descend the stairs, and bright colors jump out at you.

"I love to work with my hands," Al confides, showing off an enchanting dollhouse he's willing to sell and rows and rows of nesting havens in various hues, sizes and styles.

Cutting out larger wood or Masonite pieces with his table saw and smaller, more intricate trim with a jigsaw, Forslev makes his birdhouses in either an Alpine design or a red barn, both in several sizes.

AL ENHANCES HIS gold, brown and green Alpine model with cut-out fir trees flanking the birds' front door. He trims the red barn with a white roof and perch, paints on a brown and yellow barn door for an authentic country touch.

Forslev suggests you might like to hang two or more of his models to attract birds large and small, and to beautify your yard. They are for sale at Klehm's in Arlington Heights. If you know this generous man, you and your feathered friends may already enjoy his handiwork.

"I've given away many to friends, relatives, and acquaintances," he confessed, smiling.

Before Al began making birdhouses for Klehm's he spent some spare time designing and putting together dollhouses, the first ones for his granddaughters. He estimates he's built about 10.

Al has a "little beauty" in his workshop right now, and for the right price, he might sell. "It takes so much time, I'd want a good price," he said thoughtfully.

The three-storied Swiss chalet stands about 40 inches high and is 18 inches wide. Al has fashioned wide doors both in front and back, for easy, comfortable playtime.

FOR THIS MINIATURE domicile decorated with Alpine balcony, Forslev cut out chalet-style windows complete with flower boxes in front, "stained glass" at the sides. He pasted nature scenes simulating the outdoors to back windows.

Three floors are joined by movable stairways with railings and a large second floor landing.

Al, a friendly soul, is happily content in his retirement with wife, Millie.

"So now I'm retired. Who said retirement is boredom?" he asks, his blue eyes twinkling. "I think it is wonderful. I'm having the time of my life!"

He says he feels no differently than he did at 50 and looks it, too! Perhaps his philosophy is his secret.

"Why worry? It's a ridiculous waste of time!" says Al. And why sit in a chair adding years to your life when it's so much more fun keeping busy? Forslev has so much to do and to think about he finds life a continuing marvel and a delight.

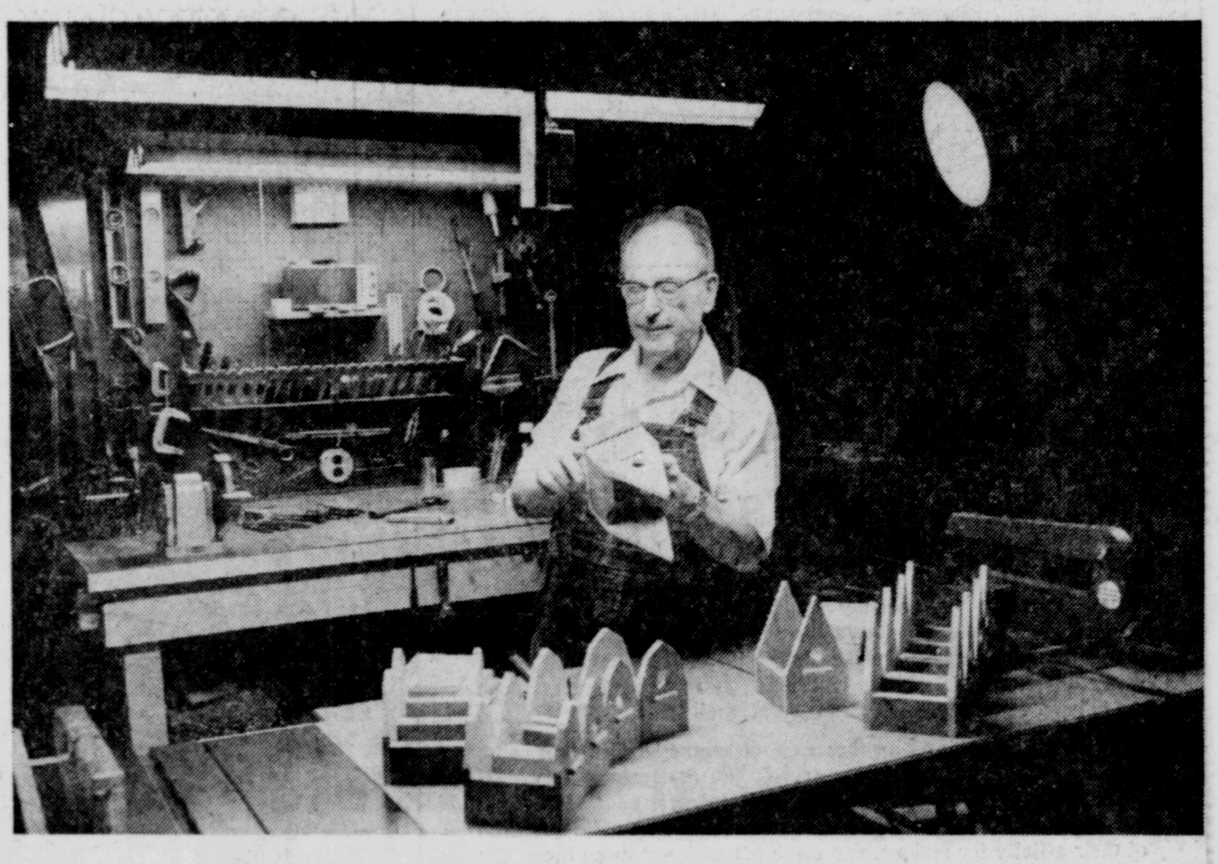
A FORMER stevedore, merchant marine, grocery and meat market owner and a banker (he worked 15 years at Northern Trust in Chicago's loop before retiring at 67), Al came to the United States from Denmark at age 23.

He met and married his lifelong sweetheart, Mildred, when she walked into his grocery asking for a job.

"A young girl, rather cute and shy, came in and applied for a job. I hired her. She soon became my best clerk — my right hand. I couldn't resist giving her one raise after another, and my overhead allowance was getting out of hand. I finally got her off the payroll by marrying her!" Al recalled his and Millie's courtship.

They now have three married children and 11 grandchildren.

Also a writer and humorist, Forslev has had dozens of his witticisms published with illlustrations in the Chicago Daily News.



Try latch-hooking a coat-of-arms

Judy Harper

Traditional crafts

The use of a family coat-of-arms as a decorative object in the home has become popular in the last five years. You can easily obtain a coat-of-arms, genuine or otherwise, through mail order advertisements in many magazines.

Some are simply framed as they are, some are reproduced in colored inks on parchment and many are used as the subject for a lovely piece of needlework.

The illustrated hanging, a latch-hook reproduction of the Graham coat-of-arms, is quite large (a 40-inch circle) and is one of the prettiest examples I've seen of coat-of-arms stitchery.

To do your own, you will first need a pattern.

DECIDE ON THE finished dimensions of your planned work and take your coat-of-arms to a printer to have it blown up to the proper size.

If your work is to be very large, you might cut the picture into four pieces and have them blown up separately. Be sure to ask for the positive print rather than the negative.

Now you are ready to put the design on canvas. You will need a piece of latch-hook canvas large enough to accommodate your planned dimensions, plus plenty of selvage to turn under when finished.

Center the coat-of-arms, pin the canvas and pattern together securely and trace all outlines with a black Sanford Nepo pen.

PAINTING THE DESIGN is not necessary, since you are allowed more creative freedom if you simply work with black lines.

Remember in your tracing that latch hook is worked in the spaces — not on the thread intersections, as in needlepoint.

As for yarn, you might use regular prepared latch-hook wool. However, the pile on the illustrated piece is not as shaggy as standard latch hook. Instead, the artist used knitting worsted that she cut in equal, but shorter, lengths. Her reason was color selection and a little more freedom in shading colors.

When you are ready to work, begin with all of the black outlines first.

When outlining is finished, first do any necessary shading. This is where you can use your own imagination, as few colors on the original print will be shaded. However, blown up to such a large scale, the work will be a little flat if you don't use some shading.

This is where you can use your own imagination, as few colors on the original print will be shaded. However, blown up to such a large scale, the work will be a little flat if you don't use some shading.

WHEN ALL DESIRED shading is finished, fill in the rest of the color and then proceed to work the background.

If you haven't done latch hook, instructions and supplies are available at well stocked needlework supply stores.

The hanging may be completed by stitching on a muslin backing and edging with gold upholstery fringe.

The doctor says

Slimming gimmicks won't trim tummy

Today I read a letter in your column that could have been written by me. I have gone on diets and have lost weight but cannot lose my tummy or slim my fat thighs. One of my friends actually asked me if I was pregnant because I look like I am four or five months along. It is so maddening to diet day after day and still be ashamed of my figure.

Could you please send me The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding The Big Middle, that you mentioned?

Also what are your views on the slimming gimmicks, such as waist belts, that are found advertised in magazines?

My view on the slimming gimmicks is — watch your wallet — they are useless.

There are only two things that will help — eliminating excess fat and toning up your muscles with exercises. I am sending you The Health Letter you requested. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Send your request to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

There is no such thing as spot reducing. You can't reduce the stomach without getting the fat off and the fat out. There is usually as much fat inside the abdomen as outside.

The best way to do that is with a combination of dieting sensibly and regular exercise. Daily walking as part of your program will help more than you realize. You can add that to the exercises listed in The Health Letter. Stick with it and you will eventually be a new, slimmer you.

My dad's hands and feet have almost doubled in size in the last two years. The doctors do not know what is wrong with him. He has bad headaches and wrings and twists his hands constantly. He entered the hospital this past week with occasional loss of memory. I would appreciate your opinion of what could be wrong with him. I am very worried about him.

It may take some detailed studies to be certain and I am sure your dad is getting those in the hospital. If your description is accurate and his feet and hands have actually enlarged considerably, there is a possibility that he has acromegaly.

What is acromegaly? It is a condition caused by overproduction of pituitary growth hormone in an individual after the normal growth phase is over. The long bones can't grow any more because they have calcified, but the hands and feet can enlarge. The nose and jaws may also enlarge changing the appearance of the face.

The condition is often associated with an enlarging pituitary gland just underneath the brain. This master hormone gland is partially encased in a bony socket. Its enlargement may cause severe headaches. High blood pressure often accompanies the disorder.

Of course, if you really mean that your father's hands and feet are just deformed from arthritis or some other disease, then the problem of acromegaly is out the window. I am sure your dad's doctors will check for acromegaly if he really has true enlargement of his feet and hands.

Soil residue results from mixing laundry

Dear Dorothy: We recently bought an automatic washer and when I wash a load of clothes there are sometimes two or three pieces that have a powdery-like film on them. We have lime in our water and wonder if that is causing it. Is there something I can use in laundering to prevent it? — Mrs. Lowell Miller

I'd almost bet this is another case of synthetic garments being scavengers. What you describe sounds like re-deposited soil combining with the hardness minerals. Most reports show that when synthetics are mixed with natural fibers, the synthetics, because of their affinity for residue, can come out with a film on them. My advice is to sort more carefully, increase the amount of detergent and use the hottest water practicable for the fabrics and colors.

Dear Dorothy: Sometimes when I'm in a hurry, I add several ice cubes to a small package of gelatin to hasten thickening. It doesn't always work. Any idea why? — Mrs. Robert Sander

Gelatin requires a precise liquid measurement. I never use ice cubes because it's too much trouble to figure out how much water they make.

Dear Dorothy: Everybody's kids are always losing mittens and here's a great winter tip I picked up in Minnesota. Get a long piece of elastic, measure it properly and run it all the way through both sleeves. Sew the center to the inside of the collar. Sew the mittens to each end. Presto — mittens they can't lose. — Helen Kennedy

Dear Dorothy: Can chlorine bleach take the dinginess out of white nylon? — Jo Moorhouse

Yes.

The subject is burros

Mary B. Good

Potting shed

What have kiwi fruit, an Arlington Heights nurseryman and the spirit of the Old West have in common? You're right, nothing!

It's just that I was sitting around a motel room 1500 miles from the Northwest suburbs eating a kiwi as my husband scanned the morning paper.

"Look who's mentioned here," he remarked.

"Who is it?" I asked, contemplating the taste of the kiwi as a cross between a grape and a melon.

"Arlington Heights nurseryman Roy Klehm" was the reply.

"Did I ever tell you about the time I walked through a banana jungle on a pomology tour and then ate all kinds of weird fruit that is never seen on the Mainland because it can't be exported? Did I mention that it was like being Eve in the Garden of Eden?" I babbled.

LOOKING UP, I noticed that my husband was gone and so was his paper.

"What was Roy Klehm's name doing in the Florida newspaper?" I asked when I finally caught up with my husband.

"I think," he said, "the man is concerned about plans to kill wild burros in the Grand Canyon."

Back in Arlington Heights, I called Roy Klehm, since my news source's newspaper had somehow disappeared into the Bermuda Triangle — or the maid took it way.

Roy affirmed that he has been writing letters to federal and elected officials, since he and his wife, Sarah, heard about the plight of the feral burros via TV recently.

THE CAMPAIGN to protect wild burros didn't start yesterday. It's been going on for a quarter of a century. A 1959 law was passed, prompted by the efforts of animal welfare interests, that prohibited the use of aircraft and mechanized vehicles in the capture of the animals. "Congress finds and declares," read the 1971 Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act, that these animals "are living symbols of the historic pioneer spirit of the West; that they contribute to the diversity of life forms within the nation and enrich the lives of the American people; and that these horses are fast disappearing from the American scene." Federal law reversed these legislations in 1976 to allow the capture and removal of wild animals from overcrowded range land.

The current controversy centers on federal plans to use helicopters to shoot from the air about 2,000 feral burros, which have made their home in the Grand Canyon of Arizona, as well as eight other Western states, since the days of the miners when the burros were brought in as pack animals.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS claim a burro population explosion, and say the burros graze on land the big-horn sheep should graze on. Big-horn sheep are a desirable native species, while the burros are exotic immigrants.

Velma "Wild Horse Annie" Johnston of Reno, Nev., is widely recognized as the key advocate for the protection of the American wild horse and burro population. She is chairman of the board of Wild Horse Organized Assistance, Inc. (WHOA) amd said in the Decembr 1976 issue of American Humane Magazine that cattlemen/ranchers are the strongest supporters of any movement to remove the wild horses and burros from public land, on the grounds of competition with the cattlemen's domestic livestock.

ROY KLEHM doesn't know why he was singled out for this bit of publicity. He is only one of many individuals who simply took it on himself to contact federal and elected officials because he didn't like what was in store for the feral burros. Roy said he has received some flak from people who can't understand the to-do about a bunch of burros when there are bigger issues. But when people ignore the plight of animals, they become insensitive and apathetic to other problems as well.

Since talking to Roy, I learned that the Humane Society of America has filed suit in Federal Court to prevent the killing of the burros. A movement to "adopt-a-burro" is afoot in some quarters. As pubilcity spread, officials at the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service, who are responsible for the control of the animals, and the U.S. National Park Service are receiving thousands of letters of protest from private citizens just like Roy, who oppose the slaughter of the burros. Environmental issues develop with people-power, and officials do take notice as more persons write letters.

CANCER DETECTION HEART ATTACK PREVENTION

A resting electrocardiogram is taken at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. to detect any heart abnormalities.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. (According to American Cancer Society publication '76 Cancer Facts and Figures.)

The health examination services available at the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection include all cancer detection procedures recommended by the American Cancer Society, Illinois Division.

Heart Disease accounts for nearly half of all deaths each year. Unlike most Cancer, Heart Attack can be postponed through reducing one's risk factors such as diet, exercise, blood pressure, smoking, etc. Dr. Morris Collen, a well-known specialist in preventive medicine, was quoted in the January, 1977 Issue of FORTUNE "if one has a checkup every year or two at age thirty-five and thereafter, directed at postponable diseases, the mortality rate from those diseases after seven years is approximately 50 percent of what it would have been without exams."

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a preventive health screening examination designed for three purposes:

1. To establish a health profile for each individual to be used as a baseline for future care.
2. To analyze an individual's risk factors for heart disease and cancer and statistically forecast probable life expectancy and suggest ways it might actually be increased by reducing the risk factors found.
3. Screen for treatable disease. Early detection and prompt treatment increase the probability of a favorable outcome.

This meticulous 3 hour, low cost examination includes a computerized medical history, health risk analysis, physical examination, proctosigmoidoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine, vision, audiometry, spirometry, glaucoma test, body measurements. Women also receive a pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination. Exercise stress test, 24 hour holter monitor, and echocardiography are available as options.

Give yourself the best protection available today against cancer and heart disease by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Illinois (Near Woodfield Mall.) Public TV launches 'Festival '77'

Channel 11 and other public television stations throughout the country Sunday will launch "Festival '77," — the third annual national fund-raising campaign offering two weeks of spectacular programming to attract new subscribers.

The special programming through March 20 will include the first full American showing of Ingmar Bergman's "Scenes From a Marriage" and a live broadcast of Puccini's "La Boheme" from New York's Metropolitan Opera.

Public Television's push for annual subscriptions, which are a minimum $20, and regular contributions have been increasingly successful over the years mainly because it has to be. More than 65 per cent of Channel 11's operating budget is supported by community funds.

Last year, Channel 11 grossed $2.9 million in subscriptions and is shooting for a record $3.4 million in subscriptions this year, said Jack Modisette, director of development for WTTW-TV.

"We have in our minds what we would like to get in subscriptions, and our subscriptions have been increasing each year, but we'll just have to wait and see," he said.

Actually, there's been a rather nice uphill trend that WTTW brass can lean on this time around. The station's regular audience has grown from an estimated 690,000 homes a week in 1971 to 1.7 million homes a week in 1976.

The subscriptions have grown from 26,000 memberships in 1972 to 122,000 in 1976. Chicago's WTTW is the most watched public television station in the country and, although the existence of the station is on solid ground, the program growth that can be afforded from year to year remains solely dependent on subscriptions and contributions.

Only one out of every 10 homes that tunes into public television supports it with funds, Modisette said, "and we need to dramatically increase that."

"We need to convince people of the good that can be done with their dollars, so that's why we work for some exceptional programming during the pledge weeks," he said. "We realize not everyone can afford to subscribe, so we'll take any contribution. We even have an installment plan and accept credit cards to make it easier."

The average pledge is about $24, Modisette said, and it costs between $30,000 and $40,000 to pay for one-hour of the locally produced "Soundstage" program, which provides big name entertainment.

It costs the station about $25,000 to produce a 30 minute show on location in the Chicago area, he said, and local production is one of three main sources of public television programming. Other shows are either acquired from independent sources or made available through the Public Broadcasting System.

But, no matter what the show and no matter what the source, programming on WTTW and other public television stations is offered uninterrupted by commercials. Special project funds, federal grants and community subscriptions pay for the program time.

"It's a community station and our costs are escalating all the time because of inflation and because of the kinds of things our viewers would like to see," Modisette said. "But, we don't want to end up in the red, we never had, and will pare off some programming before we do that."

Public television's national crusade during the next two weeks to raise $13.5 million is being helped along with special appearances and plugs made by comedian-actor Flip Wilson.

Although Wilson is the official spokesman for "Festival '77," he will not be visiting Chicago to appear on WTTW during prime pledge hours as part of his current 13-city tour, station officials said.

But, the festival is expected to go on jubilantly the next two weeks without the presence of a big name. Station officials say it should be enough that there are special programs and an impressive look at what can be done with the right kind of supporting funds.

Some of the special programs which Channel 11 will air during the next few weeks include the following. Consult your television guide for the proper times:

- "Monty Python and Friends," a look at the satirists' best performances.
- "Rock Follies," the five-part musical story of three girls who try to make it as rock singing stars.
- "Microbes and Men," and an ongoing look at the men who have solved the mysteries of germs.
- "Dr. Who" in a four-part science-fantasy adventure.
- "Sesame Street at Night," a glimpse for adults at the daytime children's program.
- "The Volga," a National Geographic Special about the Volga River and the Russian people who live along its banks.
- "All-Star Swing Festival" features past performances by big band greats like Ella Fitzgerald and Duke Ellington.
- "Scenes From a Marriage," starring Liv Ullman in the complete six-hour version of Ingmar Bergman's film.
- "Birth Without Violence," a look at the Lamaze method of child birth.
- "Nova," "The Pill for the People," tells the story of the birth control pill.
- "Soundstage," several special episodes feature performances by Jackson Browne and B. B. King.
- "I Am a Woman" features Viveca Lindfors in a one-woman portrait of women of all ages and their plights.
- "Classical Theatre" features John Neville as the 17th century poet John Milton.
- "The First Night of Pygmalion" is the story behind G. B. Shaw's most famous play.
- Loudon Wainwright II brings musical acrobatics to Channel 11's "Soundstage" at 9 p.m., stereo-simulcast on WXRT (93 FM). Wainwright is a self-described "post-psychedelic aristocratic beatnik" who's appeared as a singing surgeon on "M*A*S*H" where he performed a delicate brain surgery with guitar pick.
- The late Rod Serling narrates "The Outer Space Connection" at 7 p.m. on Channel 5, a film investigating evidence in this and past generations suggesting that human life on this planet began with the arrival of "ancient astronauts," a theory first advanced in Erich von Daniken's book, "Chariots of the Gods.
- Gabe Kaplan and Barbara Eden will be among the hosts for the Sixth Annual Las Vegas Entertainment Awards today at 9 p.m. on Channel 5. The show, taped at the Las Vegas Hilton Feb. 24 and 25, will feature performances by Bobbie Gentry and Sammy Davis Jr. The show recognizes top variety and cabaret artists.

Natural cereal tops sticky buns

What is more yummy than finger-licking, old-fashioned sticky buns?

With the Lenten season and spring upon us, here is a take-off on a classic bun with a delightful topping.

The topping ingredients are crunchy 100 per cent natural cereal, rolled oats, whole wheat, almonds, coconut, brown sugar and honey. These also are rolled with the risen yeast dough so that the crunch is swirled throughout each round.

Serve with your favorite breakfast and brunch foods or at a kaffee klatch.

CRUNCH-A-BUNS

Topping:
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- ¾ cup 100 per cent natural cereal

Buns:
- 1 package active dry yeast
- ¼ cup warm water
- ¼ cup milk, scalded, cooled
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ cup shortening
- 1 egg
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2¼ to 2½ cups all purpose flour

Filling:
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
- ¾ cup 100 per cent natural cereal
- ¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon

For topping, melt butter in 13x9-inch baking pan. Sprinkle brown sugar evenly over melted butter: top with cereal.

For buns, dissolve yeast in warm water. Combine milk, sugar, shortening, dissolved yeast, egg, salt and one and one-fourth cups flour. Mix well. Stir in enough additional flour to make soft dough.

Turn out onto lightly floured surface. Knead about 5 to 7 minutes or until smooth and elastic. Shape dough to form ball. Place in greased bowl, turning once to coat surface of dough. Cover. Let rise in warm place about 1 hour or until double in size. Punch down dough; roll out to 15x10-inch rectangle.

Crunch-A-Buns

For filling, spread dough with butter. Sprinkle with combined cereal, brown sugar and cinnamon. Roll up beginning at wide end; press together seam to seal. Cut dough into 15 one-inch thick slices. Lay slices, cut side down, in 3 rows over topping. Cover; let rise in warm place about 45 minutes or until double in size.

Bake in preheated 375-degree oven about 25 minutes or until golden brown. Immediately invert onto serving tray; serve warm. Makes 13x9-inch pan of buns.

How to keep your cool when the freezer breaks

What homemaker hasn't known the frustration of a broken freezer, particularly if it is full of expensive items such as meat.

But don't panic! If you can't find a friend who is willing or has enough space to store your frozen foods, call your refrigerator dealer or an ice cream any to find a source of dry ice. If placed in the freezer soon after the power goes off, a 25-pound cake will prevent thawing for two or three days in a freezer less than half filled or for three to four days in a full freezer. Move any food stored in a freezer's freezing compartment to its storage compartment.

WHEN HANDLING the ice, which has a temperature of 110 below zero, wear heavy gloves. Place a piece of heavy cardboard between the ice and the food. Do not chip or cut the ice, as a stray chip can cause a freezer burn. If possible, wrap a heavy blanket around the freezer box.

Don't peek! Keep the freezer closed except to put in dry ice or take out food. If the freezer is full and kept closed, actual thaw is not likely to occur until after about 15 to 20 hours. After 48 hours, the freezer temperature will reach 40 to 45 degrees, which is normal refrigerator temperature range.

FOODS MAY BE frozen if they retain ice crystals and are firm in the center, or have been kept cold at 40 degrees for no longer than one or two days after thawing. Partially thawed and refrozen foods, particularly fruits and vegetables, will lose nutritional quality.

But be careful when refreezing meat, poultry or fish. These and other foods completely thawed and warm should be discarded or used immediately upon thawing. Do not refreeze thawed meat or poultry pies or casseroles, cream pies or vegetables.

As a general rule to using thawed foods safety, remember that when in doubt, throw it out. Use the refrozen foods as soon as possible.

Company recalling its pretzel brands

Pepperidge Farm, Inc., is recalling all of the Pepperidge Farm and "Billy's" brand pretzels produced at its New Holland, Pa., plant.

The pretzels are being recalled because of the possibility that some may contain undissolved sodium hydroxide, a substance normally used in the production of pretzels, which could cause mouth burns.

Pepperidge Farm "Goldfish" and Frozen Soft Pretzels, made at other locations, are not being recalled. Any consumers having the recalled varieties on hand are asked to return them to the location where purchased.

Chinese dinner has impressive variety of foods

by LOIS SEILER

Although she had been cooking for years, Roselyn Newman of Des Plaines discovered new flavors, textures and appearances when she learned to prepare Chinese food.

Friends from Taiwan first introduced her to authentic Chinese cooking 15 years ago and to sustain her interest, they sent her a Chinese-English cookbook.

Instead of preparing a few dishes in large quantities, the Chinese make a variety of dishes in smaller amounts. Eye appeal is as important as flavor and even the plates are decorative.

HER APPETIZER is an impressive edible phoenix, a bird made from a slaw base covered with feathers of cooked liver, chicken, ham, cucumbers, carrots and Chinese radishes. The head is fashioned out of cardboard.

A touch of sesame oil is added to the phoenix and other Chinese dishes. It is used sparingly because just a few drops make a discernible difference in flavor.

Roselyn makes most of the other dishes ahead of time, keeping them warm in a low oven. However, a few require cooking just before being served.

FRIED BEAN curd and shrimp, pickled vegetables, sweet and sour pork and egg foo yung can all be made in advance. The egg foo yung is the only recipe that is not authetically Chinese, but is one that Roselyn has been making for more than 30 years. It was devised during World War II by the tuna industry to help cope with the shortage of meat.

Stir-fried beef and vegetables and fried egg rolls are cooked just before serving. A sweet and sour sauce, mustard sauce and soy sauce are always available on the table to use with any of these dishes.

Roselyn has an easy method for preparing rice. She fills a buttered casserole half-full with rice — preferably brown — and fills the remainder with hot water, adding a bouillon cube or two, depending on the size of the casserole. After dotting with margarine, she covers the dish and bakes it at 350 degrees for an hour. It should be stirred a couple of times while baking. Finely chopped celery, celery seed or riced egg may be added, if desired.

FOR DESSERT, Roselyn makes a melon soup, which is prepared by baking a honeydew melon filled with chicken broth, mandarin oranges, shredded ham and a few shrimp. She candidly admits that some like it, while others leave it alone.

Roselyn's husband, Gill, enjoys Chinese food as much as she does and has taught their seven grandchildren how to eat with chopsticks.

In addition to a Chinese cooking class, Roselyn teaches arts and crafts and sausage-making at the Congregational Church.

PHOENIX
APPETIZER PLATE

1 pound beef liver
1 chicken
3 well-rounded carrots, cooked
1 small cucumber, long and thin
½ pound ham, sliced
1 white Chinese radish, 8 to 10 inches long and 1 to 2 inches across
Cherry tomatoes
Parsley

Simmer liver until done. Cool and cut out pieces to look like feathers or petals.

Cook the chicken (gizzards left in) with 2 whole ribs celery, 1 whole carrot and 1 onion. When done, remove chicken from liquid and cool. Cut both light and dark meat to resemble feathers or petals. Save the rich chicken broth (called High Soup) for use in the melon soup and fried bean curd.

Cut the 3 cooked carrots, cucumber and Chinese radish into feathers. Cut or fold the ham into feathers.

Make a bed of slaw by chopping together cabbage, carrots and white radish. Add mayonnaise to hold mixture together. Place at one end of a large platter to form the body of a large bird. Build up the body with the featuers cut from above meats and vegetables. Form a long tail, placing cherry tomatoes at the ends of each tail feather. Form a head out of cardboard and place on bird.

Garnish platter with parsley. Lightly brush the chicken, liver and ham with sesame oil to keep it from drying out. Let guests help themselves, removing portions of the bird with chopsticks to small plates. Serves 12. Season with soy sauce, sweet and sour sauce and mustard sauce, if desired.

SWEET AND SOUR SAUCE

Pour ½ cup sugar in ½ cup rice vinegar and boil until sugar dissolves. Serve warm.

MUSTARD SAUCE

Mix together 2 tablespoons dry mustard and ¼ cup rice vinegar until smooth.

EVEN EXPERIENCED cooks can discover new flavors and textures in Chinese foods such as this phoenix appetizer plate. Roselyn Newman's guests eat the phoenix with chopsticks.

PICKLED VEGETABLES

2 small cucumbers, peeled and seeded
1 carrot, peeled
1 Chinese radish, peeled
½ cube ginger, minced fine
1 tablespoon salt
7 tablespoons sugar
7 tablespoons rice vinegar

Shred cucumbers, carrot and radish lengthwise in long, thin strips. Mix all vegetables together with the salt and let stand a half hour. Rinse with cold water and blot dry.

Cook sugar and vinegar until syrupy and sugar has dissolved. Let cool. Add vegetables and marinate at least 6 hours or as long as 3 days. Serves 12.

Note: The peel of Chinese radishes is hot, the inside is sweet. Fresh ginger is potent, so use sparingly until you are accustomed to its flavor. Test by tasting.

SWEET AND SOUR PORK

Winter takes its toll

Tomato growers report big losses

by GAYNOR MADDOX

Acres upon acres of fine ripe tomatoes. That was part of the Florida picture a few weeks ago. Then came the devastating frost.

Wayne Watkins of Orlando, general manager of Florida's Tomato Committee, describes the effects of frost. "We plant tomatoes either as bushes or on stakes. The bushes grow two and a half feet tall and have a spread of four feet.

"Look down a long line, maybe a half mile of the bushes, and you get some idea of our loss due to the freeze. The scorched field looks like a flame thrower had gone amuck," he says.

"THE STAKE CROPS use stakes five feet tall with a spread of two feet. These, too, today look as though someone had gone down the long lines with a blow torch. Brown destruction every inch of the way.

"As to our tomato losses, I would estimate around $50 million. That's a hell of a loss of cash — just when we were beginning our harvest."

"But there is a little hope," Watkins continues. "Salvage crops — meaning a few tomatoes can be salvaged from this ruin.

"Under the leaves that have been blow-torched, there are a few green leaves left. Among these are a few ripe tomatoes. We carefully screen them and find about five per cent of them okay.

"To save them, the crop must be gathered immediately, however. This is difficult with frosty ground."

"BUT THE Florida freeze is like the ill wind — it blows a blessing on the Mexican crop," reports Paul di Mare, the largest tomato grower in the state, with headquarters in Hempstead.

"Mexico usually supplies about half the tomato market in the United States. But now they have about 100 per cent of the market except what we can salvage from our nearly destroyed crop.

"They are rushing their tomatoes to market, not giving us time to salvage what we can. And they are trying to up the prices way beyond a normal justification. We here in Florida question their tactics."

He explains that not until the middle of April will the new crops of tomatoes be ready for harvesting.

"Some of our fields are like broken-up ice ponds today. We can't plant new bushes on that kind of soil. We must wait until the weather warms up. But if it does warm up in time, it will take at least until April before we can pick the new crop," he says.

WHAT WILL BE done about the farm laborers and truckers who stand around waiting for a job? "I think we are taking care of them now — with government aid, of course," di Mare says.

"It was around 68 degrees here last night," says Marvin Pfainder, manager of the Tomato Exchange in Orlando. "But if it drops further, says to around 32 degrees, that means trouble for us. The fields will freeze again and delay replanting.

"There is practically nothing left to destroy — except our changes of replanting now and to look forward with hope to April," he says.

He also says that "the overall loss will amount to $350 million. That includes losses on green peppers, sweet corn, tomatoes, soft squash, green beans, cucumbers and of course citrus. Prices will go up, but not out of sight."

U.S. to use more hamburger: experts

Experts on meat and economics at two leading universities expect hamburger to account for half of America's beef supply within the next 10 years.

It's already up to 40 per cent.

Larry D. Jones, associate extension professor in marketing at the University of Kentucky, attributes the growing consumption of ground beef to the widening price differential between it and other cuts.

Even if the price span should shrink, Jones doesn't expect people to return to eating steak as much as before because, he said, "Working wives find ground beef easier to prepare."

AT THE UNIVERSITY of Minnesota in St. Paul, extension meat specialist Richard Epley predicts two distinctly different kinds of beef production may soon evolve to meet consumer demand.

He thinks one type will strive for the maximum amount of lean meat in the shortest possible time to produce hamburger and similar products. He said technology already is available to process very lean beef into very fine flakes that can be molded in the shape of steak.

Epley said a second system would yield high quality beef with relatively high marbling to use for high quality steaks and roasts.

About 51 per cent of the average beef carcass is used for steaks and roasts and about 21 per cent is used for ground beef and stew meat. Epley said trimmed fat and bone account for the remainder. (UPI)

'Shrimp' label unfair to delicacy

An insignificant little person often is referred to as a shrimp, but that doesn't seem fair to this epicurean delight from Louisiana. For many centuries, these translucent beauties of many hues and colors have been considered Queen of the Shellfish, even if they do look slightly like hunchbacks.

The Greek word for them means "swimming" and in fact they are great at the backstroke — that is, they swim backwards for speed. Shrimp have very fine relatives such as lobsters, crabs and crayfish, all very classy delicacies that have been tempting palates since the days of Early Rome and Ancient Greece. Shrimp are rich in calcium, phosphorous, copper and sulphur and they taste like iodine because they contain that, too.

Once upon a time, after the shrimp had dried out in the sun, men danced on them to separate the meat from the shells. Today, machines have replaced feet and now they are known as shrimp dancers.

Ah, the delightful scent of strawberries! No wonder their scientific name is 'fragaria,' from the Latin word for fragrant. But since they're not made from straw, why are they called strawberries? Is it because originally they were brought to market strung on straws? Yes, says one authority. No, says another, it was the Saxons who named them, calling them 'stroberie,' meaning strewn, because they grew scattered along the ground.

Strawberries are strewn throughout every state of the Union, In fact, we produce more than 300 million quarts of them a year, not counting the wild ones that grow in profusion in many sandy areas.

In 1712, the biggest strawberries in the world were grown in Chile, according to a sea captain from Europe who brought back their plants to France and England. The British were unimpressed — they liked their own smaller berries better. But strawberry festivals were very big in 17th century England. At one of them, a prominent doctor was heard to exclaim: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did."

Chinese dinner offers new dining experience

2 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
2 maraschino cherries

Mix together the egg, ¼ teaspoon salt, MSG, soy sauce and 4 tablespoons cornstarch. Add cubed pork, stir and let pork marinate 1 hour.

Remove pork cubes, dip them in additional cornstarch and fry in a little vegetable or peanut oil until brown and crispy.

Mix together the onion, garlic, celery, parsley, vinegar, sugar, 6 tablespoons water, ½ teaspoon salt and catsup. Bring mixture to a boil, adding tomato, pineapple and 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Add fried pork to mixture with 2 tablespoons oil. Stir-fry until done. Can be kept warm in low oven to hold.

Serve on platter garnished with pineapple slices cut in half and arranged to look like butterflies. In center of each butterfly, place a cherry.

FRIED BEAN CURD AND SHRIMP

2/3 cup flour
1 egg, beaten until fluffy
½ cup High Soup (chicken broth or bouillon)

½ teaspoon sesame oil
2/3 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon MSG
1 bag (6 to 8 ounces) tiny frozen cooked shrimp, defrosted
1 green onion, chopped fine, including stem
½ inch square ginger, diced fine

Keep cutting bean curd in halves to make squares ½ by 1-inch. Dip into flour and then into beaten egg. Saute in a little oil until golden brown on both sides in a 10-inch skillet.

Combine all remaining ingredients and pour over browned bean curd in skillet. Cook until it sets. Lightly brush top with seasme oil. Place skillet in oven, cover, and keep warm on low heat. Cut in wedges to serve. Serves 12.

1 rib celery, chopped fine
1 medium onion, chopped fine
1 can water chestnuts, sliced or diced
1 can bamboo shoots, drained
1 pound fresh mushrooms

In a small saucepan, combine liquid from bean sprouts with soy sauce, cornstarch and bouillon cubes. Cook until clear and thickened.

Combine eggs with tuna, bean sprouts and any or all of the remaining vegetables. Leftover beef, pork or shrimp, chopped fine, can be substituted for the tuna. Spoon into a skillet containing a small amount of oil, making patties that are 3 to 4 inches in diameter. Fry on both sides. Pour a little gravy over all, cover and keep warm in oven. Serve woth soy sauce or other sauces.

Remove two inches from the top of melon and scoop out seeds. Scallop edge of melon. Scoop out fruit from the lid and drop into melon. Drop melon into scalding hot water for just a minute or two and remove.

Measure enough High Soup (Chicken broth) to fill 2/3 of melon. Then place soup into a bowl and combine with remaining ingredients. Pour into melon.

Cover melon with foil and place upright in a stainless steel bowl or other oven-proof bowl, propped up with crumbled foil. Bake at 300 degrees for 3 hours. Serve in small dishes, scooping out melon with the soup. Serves 12.

Versatile lamb and noodle dish

The many cuts of lamb make it a versatile and less expensive meat for a quick family or party meal. Brown shoulder blade or arm lamb chops in a heavy skillet and make a well-seasoned mushroom sauce from the skillet drippings to top the lamb chops. Serve on a bed of hot noodles.

SHOULDER LAMB CHOPS WITH MUSHROOM SAUCE AND NOODLES

- 4 shoulder blade or arm lamb chops (about ½ pound per person, cut ¾-inch thick)
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 can (10½ ounces) golden mushroom soup
- ½ cup chopped celery
- 1½ cups bouillon
- ¼ teaspoon dried rosemary
- ¼ teaspoon dried thyme
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- Hot cooked buttered noodles

In heavy skillet with tight fitting cover, brown lamb chops in butter or margarine; then remove chops. Add garlic and cook over medium-low heat for 1 or 2 minutes. Blend flour into drippings and garlic. Combine soup, celery, bouillon, rosemary and thyme. Then gradually add to flour, stirring continuously. Add salt and pepper.

Return chops to skillet. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, stirring occasionally, about 30 to 40 minutes or until chops are tender. Arrange chops on bed of hot noodles. Serve with remaining mushroom sauce. Serves 4.

Many homes carry poisoning risk: study

A study of more than 2,000 homemakers indicates that almost two-thirds have high-risk households where food poisoning is concerned.

The survey by the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Dept of Agriculture said the following practices carry a risk of causing illness:

Cook hamburgers rare; leave cooked meat and poultry or egg or fish salad sandwiches at room temperature more than two hours; keep meat or leftovers in a refrigerator whose temperature is above 45 degrees Fahrenheit; or cook whole poultry partly and finish cooking it later. (UPI)

Mixing up a quick pizza

Pizza "Pie" Deluxe comes by its middle name honestly. The delectable thick crust is actually begun from a convenient pie crust mix. With the addition of yeast, warm water, sugar and an egg, the mix yields a quality thick crust. The crust is covered with a spicy, tangy tomato sauce filled with ground beef, then topped with green pepper, mushrooms and Mozzarella cheese.

PIZZA "PIE" DELUXE

Crust:

- 1 package active dry yeast
- ¼ cup warm water
- 1 10-ounce package Flako Pie Crust Mix
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon sugar

Meaty Pizza Sauce:

- 1 pound ground beef, browned, drained
- 1 16-ounce can tomatoes
- 1 6-ounce can tomato paste
- 2 tablespoons instant minced onion
- 2 teaspoons oregano leaves
- 1½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon basil leaves
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Toppings:

- 1 small green pepper, cut into thin strips
- 1 4-ounce can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
- 2 cups (8 ounces) shredded Mozzarella cheese

For crust, dissolve yeast in warm water. Add pie crust mix, egg and sugar; mix well (dough will be sticky). Turn dough out onto generously floured surface; knead about 3 to 4 minutes or until smooth and elastic. Let dough rest 5 minutes. Press dough into greased 14-inch round pizza pan. Cover; let rise in warm place 15 to 20 minutes or until nearly double in size. Bake on lower rack in preheated 425-degree oven 5 minutes.

For meaty pizza sauce, combine all ingredients. Spread over crust.

For toppings, arrange green pepper, mushrooms and cheese over meat mixture. Bake on lower rack in preheated 425-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes until cheese is melted and crust is golden brown. Serve with crushed red pepper and grated Parmesan cheese, if desired. Makes 14-inch round pizza.

Keep kitchen knives in good shape

Cutlery is such a basic kitchen tool, much thought should be given to its selection and care. Keep knives in good condition by using a sharpening steel to realign or reset the "teeth" (microscopic rough edges that roll over and become bent with use). A sharpening hone or flat sharpening stone, used only infrequently on quality knives, will put a new edge on a dull knife. One precaution: A saw-toothed or scalloped-edge knife should be reset or sharpened only on the back side (without scallops), or the crescent edges will be worn away.

Good care is important for all knives. It is best to suds knives in dishwater one by one and rinse them the same way to prevent accidental cuts. Carbon steel knives should be washed and dried after each use. Stainless steel is dishwasher safe, but the manufacturer may recommend handwahing because of the construction of the knife or its handle.

The best storage for knives is in holders with a slot for each knife, which protects the blade.
